Grasshoppers Eat Corn to the Ground. Hunting Moisture. Experts Say—Worst Damage Is Near Lexington and Broken Bow. Heavy damages to cornfields of Dawson and Custer counties, by grasshoppers, was reported Monday by L. M. Gates, state entomologist thru the middle Platte valley and adjacent territory. Specimens of cornstalks, gnawed in two by greedy grasshoppers, were brought back by Gates. Farmers of the two counties, Gates said, are taking steps to save the entire corn crop from being wiped out. After stripping most of the green leaves from the corn, the hoppers are cutting the stalks and eating them down to the ground. Hoppers are attacking the stalk, the entomologist says. In search of moisture. "On the trip we saw fields of 100 acres or more of corn that have been ruined," Gates said. In company with county agricultural agents, he visited the infested parts of both counties. Farmers six or seven miles north-east of Broken Bow are the hardest hit in Custer county, while the farmers of a section seven miles north-east of Lexington are fighting the hoppers hardest to save their corn. Corn lands north of Overton, and even in the irrigated valley sections are being threatened by the hoppers it was reported to Gates during the trip. South of the river, the hoppers have started hatching in great numbers and are feeding on the green corn. Dawson and Custer counties have not yet asked for aid from the state in fighting the pest. Farmers have organized under the direction of the county agents of the two counties and are spreading poison. The hopper menace in the middle Platte country came a little late to endanger small grains, the many farmers have reported grasshoppers getting into shocks of wheat, oats and rye.

REIVERSHIP IS ORDERED. Toronto—The Great Lakes Paper company, Ltd., was ordered placed in receivership by Justice Sergewick, in the supreme court of Ontario. The National Trust company, trustee and holder of $19,000,000 of first mortgage bonds, was appointed receiver of $200,000, due March 1 on these bonds, caused the action. The company is a subsidiary of E. W. Bacon of Minneapolis.

F. R. McKeelan of the National Trust company, which also was named manager of the receivership, was requested in the hope that it would improve the paper concern's business outlook for the future. He explained that customers might otherwise have hesitated to place orders, fearing "action might be taken on behalf of bondholders or creditors which would render their contracts ineffective."

FILM STAR WINS A POINT. Washington — Duncan Renaldo, film actor, who rose to stardom in "Trader Horn" has won the right to stay in the United States unless the labor department can find conclusive proof he is an alien. A warrant of arrest issued some time ago for him has been quashed, officials said, because the government could not prove an original charge that he was a Rumanian.

The film star, officials said, contended he was born an American in Camden, N. J., and taken to Rumania when very small. He said he came to the United States in 1923 as an seaman, leaving in 1929 on an American passport to Africa to make "Trader Horn."

Agency for Farm Board Controls Updike Company

Big Co-Operative Expands Activities in Market at Chicago—Investigation Is Under Way

Chicago—The Farmers' National Grain corporation announced it had purchased control of the Updike Grain company. S. P. Arnold, former president of the Chicago board of trade, made the announcement of the sale with the comment it "would be a surprise to most of the members of the board of trade."

George S. Milnor, president of the grain corporation, then confirmed it, explaining the purchase was made in order to give the corporation membership in the Chicago Clearing House association.

Board of trade officials said a committee was appointed Wednesday to investigate the relations of the Farmers' National Grain corporation with the Updike Grain company and to determine how long the former has controlled the other. The committee also will investigate the "moral and legal aspects" of a concern dealing in grain which controls its own commission agency, as board officials said, will be the relationship of the Farmers' National concern to the Updike company. The committee was understood to be drafting a new board of trade rule to forbid such relationships in the future.

Milnor Explains Stand. In a formal statement, Milnor declared the federal farm board, which controls the Farmers' National Grain corporation, was set up to minimize speculating, but now was entering that field.

The following statement was issued by Milnor:

"The Farmers' National Grain corporation, owned by more than twenty-five grain co-operative associations, which, in turn, are owned by thousands of grain producers, is charged with the responsibility of developing a nationwide marketing organization for the efficient and economical marketing of producers' grain. Farmers' National business is conducted along much the same lines of any other large grain business. Among its policies is one of using grain futures for the purpose of hedging the unsold supplies of grain that it owns.

"One of the corporation are members of the Chicago board of trade, and practically all other boards of trade, merchants exchanges, etc., in the principal markets of the country. As a member of the boards of trade it acts as broker in handling grain futures for customers, including its own members.

Membership Is Limited. "Under the rules of the Chicago board of trade and the clearing house association, corporations are debarred from membership in the clearing house unless such corporations were members prior to April 2, 1929. As the Farmers' National Grain corporation was not formed until the fall of 1929 it found that under the rule mentioned it was debarred from clearing house membership, which, in turn, handicapped it in the expense of doing business as compared to competitive corporations that are members of the clearing house. Updike Grain company was one of the corporations having membership in the clearing house prior to April 2, 1929. As some of the principal stockholders of the Updike Grain corporation bought a controlling interest in the company, which thereby became in effect a subsidiary.

"It is noted that under the rules of the board of trade have been violated in the transaction. Thru the control of the Updike Grain company the Farmers' National Grain corporation has no more privileges than are granted to other corporations, who are members of the clearing house. It is difficult for me to understand why members of the board of trade should object to a corporation owned by the farmers having the same privileges in doing business that they have granted to other corporations."—State Journal.

HIGH WAGES ARE WANTED

Chicago—A Sheaffer, manufacturer just back from Europe, advised American business men and industrialists that only by continuing high wages and maintaining the present American scale of living can the United States avert the closing down of factories and a general slowing up of industry.

"Don't reduce wages if you can help it," he warned. "If you are compelled to do so, restore them quickly. Retaining our present scale for both the laborer and the producer is the single solution for unemployment and it is the only thing that will put the largest number of purchasers in the market to buy and consume additional goods."
