FOOD

Henry Ford's order that every married man employed in his Iron Mountain plant must plant a vegetable garden next year is an interesting experiment which will be criticized by several different kinds of people. Commission men and dealers in garden produce will see in it a possible loss of good markets. And the people who think that on one acre there is no right to cultivate, to his employees about anything except their actual work in the factory will regard this order as an invasion of the individual worker's rights.

My own view is that the results of the Iron Mountain experiment, if records are carefully kept, as I assume they will, may prove to be the most powerful stimulus to the general movement away from the cities and back to the economic independence of the small husband and wife unit of what he and his family consume.

WORK
In my "Home" column, Berkshire, Massachusetts, there are three important industries. One of the General Electric manufacturing plants is at Pittsfield, the county branch of the Dairymen's League, grows feed for the cows and a pen of pigs on his hundred acres, besides cutting enough wood every winter to keep his house warm. He is a lot better off than the city worker who has nothing to fall back on in a downing.

ENGLAND
The fall of the Labor Government in England and the desertion of the Labor Party by Ramsay Mac-

Donald and other leaders does not necessarily mean the end of the Socialist movement in Great Britain, but it does mean that the effort to force social and economical changes faster than they can be paid for has failed. The trouble with almost every movement for social reform is that its proponents want to change everything instantly.

Great Britain's new Government is pledged to balance the budget—that is, to cut down governmental expenses to a point where the income from all forms of taxation will meet them. That will slow up such reforms as employment insurance and the national housing program, but it will keep England out of bankruptcy and help restore world trade which in the long run probably will be just as beneficial for the workers. It takes more than one generation to change the course of social progress.

THRIFT
The president of the largest savings bank in America is advising his 240,000 depositors to stop hoarding up their money, to draw it out and spend it for things which will need later and which they can buy cheaper now than at any time since the war. That is good advice. True thrift consists not in hoarding cash but in spending wisely. There never was, and probably will not again be for a long time, a better opportunity to buy a home, for example, or the equipment and furnishings of a home, or any of the other necessary things which do not lose their value with the passage of time. And every dollar spent now hastens the day when the dollars will again circulate freely.

AGE
The average American is older than he used to be. Twenty years ago our average national age was about twenty-three; now it is about twenty-seven. Not so many children, grown-ups living longer.

This change is bound to be reflected in every phase of life. We will tend to take a more reasoned, less emotional view of social, political and economic matters, for example. We probably will lose as a nation some of the pioneering, adventurous spirit of youth. We will grow to value security more than excitement. There were boys in twenty-one among the leaders of our Revolution, the signers of our Declaration of Independence, the drafters of our Constitution. Today we look on a man of thirty as rather too young for the serious responsibilities of government. We are in danger of becoming stogey and conservative, as a nation, unless more young men forge their way to the front as political leaders.

Bob Shoots At Burglar.
Last Sunday night, Robert Black was awakened by someone endeavoring to enter his apartments and also the basement of the house, and by the barking of a neighbor dog. Neighbors also heard the disturbance, and as Mr. Black got a glimpse at the maurader he fired a one barrel shotgun at the prowler as he ran past the church just south of the house. Whether he was hit or not is not known as when Mr. Black was able to get out of the house and down town he was gone. This night prowling is assuming serious frequency and it is a wonder some do not get a good charge of goose shot.

He was married at Plattsmouth, Neb., to Altie M. Sayles, Dec. 14, 1871, his wife preceding him in death on May 14, 1916. When quite young his parents moved to Nebraska City, later to Union, Neb., where he and his wife united with the Methodist church from which he never transferred his membership. His father was a pioneer Methodist minister of Missouri and eastern Nebraska, where they shared the privations of the early settler, helping to shape the future of the present state of Nebraska.

Mr. Cannon established his first home at Union, and here his son, Melvin T. Cannon, was born. Leaving Union in 1878, in company with his brother, S. L. Cannon, and family and his sister, Mrs. Mary Gibson, and family he and his family went to California and later to Oregon, where they spent six months in search of better opportunities than offered in Nebraska, but they decided to return to Nebraska in the spring, settling on a Custer county homestead in Rose Valley, where his daughter, Ruby, was born. Slow Harvest Helps Keep Up Cotton Prices

Movement for No-Crop in 1932 Continues to Spread; Little Interest in Another Conference.

New Orleans, La.—While sentiment for a 1932 "Cotton Holiday" apparently mounted in the South today, cotton interests here pointed out that an unusually slow harvest is apparently keeping the price of cotton up.

A depressed cotton market has discouraged some farmers from picking their cotton. Cotton is moving slowly to market now. The less that moves, the higher the price.

And while farmers hesitated to harvest their present crop, cottonrust was leading a hand in reducing Louisiana's production this year, with thousands of acres decimated by the rust. This was discovered by Mr. R. A. Wasson, Louisiana State University Extension Service agronomist, and reported yesterday.

The Texas Legislature seemed on the verge of being called into special session by Gov. Ross S. Sterling to consider the cotton situation, with Georgia promising to follow and South Carolina ready to do the same. Gov. Huey P. Long of Louisiana, author of the plan to ban cotton in 1932, meanwhile used telephone, telegraph, print and the air to urge haste in its general adoption. Louisiana has already done so.

Gov. Harvey Parnell of Arkansas cheered no-crop advocates with an announcement that the idea of prohibiting cotton next year was "gaining strength rapidly in Arkansas." Mass meetings favorable to the cotton holiday continued unabated in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Texas, Arkansas and South Carolina.

Traders here feel that if Texas legislators believed an average reduction law would not be constitutional, they would adopt the no-crop plan, Texas and Louisiana together produce approximately 40 per cent of all American cotton; South Carolina brings it up to probably 48 per cent. Only four other important states would be necessary to insure the plan's success. The Texas Cotton Ginners' Association is the principal opponent in that State of the no-crop plan. It is reported here.

Little interest seems to have been aroused here by the proposal of Gov. O. Max Gardner of North Carolina that another south-wide cotton conference be held, this time in Memphis, Sept. 14 and 15, to discuss "conservative" measures for combating the depressed market.

OVERSEA ROUTE PLANNED

New York—Captain Von Gronau, German aviator, who flew from Germany to Chicago across the northern circle route, came to New York with the announcement that he was ready to submit proposals for an inter-continental air mail line to his German backers.

The Groeland Wal in which he made his trans-Atlantic flight, was berthed beside the Do-X, giant German seaplane. The Von Gronau ship left Cleveland at noon, Captain Von Gronau will submit his recommendations for the Arctic mail and express line to Lufthansa, German flying company, next week.

He will recommend a route from Hamburg thru Reykjavik, Iceland; Iqvitut, Greenland, and a point in western Labrador to two terminals, Chicago and New York.

"Such a route would mean forty-five hours of flying between the German and American terminals," he said. "With relay planes ready at each point, the trans-shipment of postal matter between the two countries should be swift and highly beneficial to trade."

TROPHY TO AMERICAN TEAM

Camp Perry, O.—The American Legion rifle team won the national trophy match at the national rifle tourney here by posting a score of 561 out of possible 600 to top eighty-one six-man teams. The United States cavalry team took second place with 560 and the national team of the District of Columbia placed third with 559. The match was fired over the 200 and 600 yard ranges, ten shots slow fire standing and ten from prone position.

The United States navy team captured the enlisted men's team match with a total of 567 out of a possible 600, by outranking the United States marine corps which had the same score.

The Washington guard team won the championship regimental team match by scoring 563 out of a possible 600 over the same ranges used in the two previous matches.

COAL STABILIZATION BILL

Des Moines—Members of the United Mine Workers of America will combine in requesting the enactment of the coal stabilization bill proposed by Senator Watson of Indiana, John Lewis, president of the mine workers, said. Lewis, here for a Labor day address, made the statement in an interview. He was careful to point out that the backing of his organization was not for governmental operation or ownership of the mines.

The Watson proposal, he said, provided only for restricted regulation of the industry on the ground that coal is a public utility.
