Our glorious country, among other things, is suffering from a billious attack.

At last we printers get a lucky break. A fashion note says black ferns are to be popular this season.

Next year the World's fair is to be held in Chicago. And no doubt, they'll honor distinguished visitors with the Jimmy to the city.

Seems to be something wrong with the "hunger march" idea. They don't march and they insist on being fed well by the cities they pass through.

In 1931 there were three Fridays that fell on the thirteenth of the month. This year there is but one. If that doesn't cheer you up, you just don't want to be cheered up.

"Sleeps a Week. Then Needs a Rest." That's no mystery. Sleeping is really pretty hard work, as anyone who has put in a Sunday at it knows when time comes to go back to work Monday morning.

The young men used to loiter on the outside of church buildings, waiting for their girl friends to emerge after the preaching services. Now they drive to her home, honk several times and take her to a picture show.

One of the new motor models is said to be able to turn a corner safely at the rate of seventy miles an hour. Maybe that's the sort of vehicle to use while pursuing prosperity, which is always just around the next corner.

An editorial colleague commenting on Theodore Dreiser's new book, says Mr. Dreiser takes no notice of progress that has been made in the last forty years, and that as he appears in the authorship of "Tragic America," is hopelessly out of date. But Mr. Dreiser writes his books pretty long, and he might have been really up to date when he started the book.

Well, the days are dark and dreary, and the roads are full of ruts; but it won't be long till winter is gone, and gay Cock Robin struts.

They're using coffee as locomotive fuel in Brazil this year, and we suppose they have a stronger grade which they keep down there held back from export.

The fish that swallowed Jonah, according to a scientific investigator, was not a whale. That clears the ancient reporter for the incident, who never said it was.

The third party movement seems to be materializing even less than usual. Which is natural when even the regular parties don't know where to turn for campaign funds.

A Missouri editor points out that no veteran pipe smokers are found in the criminal classes. Maybe it's much too easy for bloodhounds to pick up the scent of a veteran pipe.

Ex-President Coolidge sums up the causes of economic disturbance by saying "It was a general lack of judgment." Very comprehensive, of course, and characteristically Coolidgean, but what we privately think he really said was: "No gumption."

And then there was the young woman, who climbed out of bed at a comparatively early hour for her first calisthenics by radio, went through the exercises and then found she was so fatigued that it was necessary for her to get back into bed to recuperate.

A new plea in a Texas murder trial is "apparent danger." The defendant, it appears, considered himself in apparent danger of being shot at. The phrase has such a modern ring that we are almost sure the defense counsel at some recent period served one of these utilities corporations which make a charge for "readiness to serve."

AN EXPENSIVE "RAT HOLE"

Senator Smoot of Utah cannot be accused of a lack of restraint in speech; he has few words to throw away, unless, of course, he happens to be defending the tariff on sugar. So when he abandons his reserve and calls the appendix to the Congressional Record on "old rat hole," and demands that it be stopped up, we cannot ascribe such language in him to mere recklessness.

The appendix to the Congressional Record is that part of the official publication of congress into which members dump their undelivered speeches and everything else they want to get printed at government expense. It contains poetry, or what members take to be poetry, articles clipped from newspapers and magazines, radio addresses, high school essays and whatever else it may please members to insert under the privilege of "leave to print." Mr. Smoot estimates it costs the government $40 a page to keep this "rat hole" open.

On that basis it has cost the government, in recent days, $360 to print a 9-page article by a non-member of congress, inserted by Senator Bingham of Connecticut; $380 for nine and a half pages of court decisions on congressional redistricting, inserted by Representative Reed of New York; $20 for a letter by Joe Tumulty about Speaker Garner; $60 for a newspaper article urging a 5-billion-dollar bond issue for unemployment relief, inserted by Senator Brookhart of Iowa; $60 for a radio speech before a Republican club by a friend of Senator Norbeck of North Dakota; $60 for a radio speech on "Liberty" by a friend of Representative Hull of Illinois; $120 for a newspaper article inserted by Senator Goldsborough of Maryland; $20 for a letter about the Mooney case, inserted by Senator Costigan of Colorado; $290 for an undelivered speech on the Washington bicentennial, inserted by Representative Browning of Tennessee; $110 for a newspaper article on prohibition, inserted by Senator Wagner of New York; $110 for a radio interview with Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, inserted by Senator Borah of Idaho; $250 for an undelivered speech about taxes in Canada, by Representative Pratt of New York; $440 for an article on coal mining, inserted by Senator Costigan of Colorado. For a 5-day period during which these and other offerings were made by members of house and senate, it is estimated the "rat hole" cost the taxpayers $3,489. The cost probably never is below that for any week of a session of congress, and frequently runs much higher.

The abuse of the "leave to print" is an old one. It is frequently brought to the attention of congress by members who recognize its abuse, but nothing ever is done about it. Mr. Smoot says he doesn't suppose anything will be done about it now. Probably nothing will be. There's something about the humbug of printing a speech that never was delivered that has a natural fascination for congress. Perhaps the only way to stop it would be to require members to read every word that goes into the Record; as that would leave congress no time to do anything else the practice probably wouldn't last long.

LIFE UNDER DICTATOR

The Vatican consenting, the other day 1,138 of Italy's 1,225 school teachers and college professors took the oath of allegiance to the fascist regime now required by Italian law. A few older men stood by their principles. One little group of 12 professors gave up their posts rather than swear. At their head was a once famed statesman whose name is never mentioned in the fascist press, 71-year-old Vittorio Emanuele Orlando, professor of law at Rome university, in 1917 premier of Italy, and one of the "big four" (with Wilson, Clemenceau, Lloyd George) at the Versailles peace conference. Others who joined him: Senator Francesco Ruffini, one-time minister of education, now a professor of sacred law; Prof. Vito Volterra (physics); Prof. Giorgio Levi Della Vida (Semitic languages); Prof. Ernesto Buonaiuti (religious history), who once gave up the priesthood rather than compromise his method of teaching religious history. Thousands of schoolboys not only swore new allegiance to fascism last week, but subscribed to a newly issued "fascist decalogue." Typical commandments: "(6) Arrange your time in such manner that your work is a pleasure and your play is work." "(10) Every day devoutly thank God for having made you an Italian and a fascist."—Time.

Another of those unfathomable mysteries, is why a woman will pay $25 for a footstool that no one dares put his foot on.

CONGRESS DISTURBS EUROPE

Impending elections in France, Germany and the United States are given by the French government as the reason for suggesting a postponement of the Lausanne conference on reparations, but it is apparent that the chief factor in the situation, from the point of view of the creditor powers, is the attitude of the present American congress. The debate on the Hoover moratorium and the terms under which it finally was approved were a distinct shock to Europe. Evidently, the French hope that time, or the next election, may produce a change in the congressional policy against the cancellation or reduction of "any of the indebtedness of foreign countries to the United States."

Germany's creditors, among which France is by far the largest, consistently have sought to link reparations with their war debts to the United States, a connection which this country just as consistently has denied. From their point of view, Germany should not be relieved of her reparation payments, unless they are correspondingly relieved of their debts to the United States. Therefore, they are loath to undertake any permanent readjustment of the reparations schedule, in the face of congress's recent declaration, particularly since this country has declined to be represented in any way at the Lausanne conference.

Under the circumstances, the European governments have been considering temporary expedients, because it is generally admitted that Germany will be unable to resume anything like full reparation payments at the expiration of the Hoover moratorium on July 1. Among the creditors there are reported to be two policies toward temporary relief. The French are said to be in favor of continuing the moratorium for six months or a year. But the British are understood to feel that so short a respite would leave Germany in great uncertainty, thereby retarding her economic recovery, and that the extension, to be of any value, should be for several years. The Germans are pressing for a prompt settlement, on the basis of their argument that they cannot pay reparations for an indefinite period.

The negotiations, centering about the Lausanne conference, seem directed at reaching a common policy among the European powers; so that they may deal together with the United States. But congress in its present temper does not offer them much encouragement.

THIS WAY OUT!

If you have ear drums prepare to shed them now. It seems probable, says Dr. W. A. Evans that the ear drum is less important than heretofore regarded. He doesn't quite class it with the appendix—yet. But give the gentleman time. They won't take much time. But they'll take your ear drums, and see if we aren't right. They take the appendix, don't they? Have you ever tried to save your appendix from a surgeon who honestly believed it ought to be taken from you? If so, you didn't get far. You didn't, but the appendix is probably going yet. How about tonsils? Some people have been able to hang on to them for quite a while but, sooner or later in walks Old an Ectomy and cut go Tonsil, Ectomy and all. Few people ever beat the tonsil game.

What makes it difficult is that these radical gentlemen are in dead earnest about it. They believe that the only way to cure you or save your life, maybe, often depends upon taking something out of you. And it must be admitted that very frequently they are right. But, if you have ever noticed, they never take out anything that you can't get along without. That's what makes it look so bad for the ear drum. They are learning—gosh, they may have learned already!—that you can do without the ear drum. That, in the words of medical science, cooks the goose of the ear drum.

Now just as many people have trouble with their heart or liver or stomach, we dare say, as they have with their gall bladder, appendix and tonsils. But they seldom take out the heart or the stomach or the liver. Or, if they do, the patient never is quite the same afterwards. No, they turn to one of the dispensables—the appendix, the tonsil, the gall bladder. Vicariously they take the rap for the stomach, the heart and the liver. They are the very first to go the way of all flesh. And now, it appears, the ear drum is about to join the big parade.

Well, we shan't argue the point. After all, we are firm believers in medical science. All the same, we shall hate like sixty to see the old ear drums go. We've never actually seen them, but just to know that they are there—or were a moment ago—has helped a lot.—World-Herald.

SIGNS AT THE TURNING

"One swallow maketh not summer," as was said a long time ago. Yet when several swallows flit about in plain view, it is a fairly good sign that more may be hovering just in the background and that summer, or at least spring, can be depended upon to come around without eternal delay. The signs of reviving business are not general, but they seem to be growing in numbers and are of such a nature as to be fairly unmistakable in their import.

Here, for example, was the New York motor car show of last week, which closed with manufacturers and dealers in a markedly cheerful frame of mind, induced by the attendance and by public interest in the exhibition and by sales ahead of last year. Then comes the report of yesterday that the usual showing of heavy decline in December sales of vehicles, as compared with November, had been disturbed, with sales for the last month in the year this time actually ahead of those for the preceding month. Again, there were reports from the annual furniture mart in Chicago last week that were quite similar in tone from those of the New York display, thus indicating a revival of interest in another branch of business.

Reports from the railroads, which for many months were discouraging, now are more optimistic as benefits from higher rates begin to be apparent and as the prospect for an amicable settlement of wage differences grows. Building is below normal, but there are indicated gains in that field. Underlying the whole business structure is the promise of early credit expansion, possibly through federal reserve board action, but certainly through enactment of the several credit measures by congress.

It's a long lane that has no turning, and the swallows will come back. Confidence will grow as the signs of improvement multiply, and that itself will help the betterment along.

Some researchers have decided that a man becomes unfit to drive a motor car when he attains the age of 50. Our own idea is that a motorist who lives to be 50 has established a claim to complete fitness.

AFTER 40 bowel trouble

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot grip; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, or when your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

WINTERSTEEN P. T. A.

Wintersteen Hill P. T. A. met at the little brick school in regular monthly session on Wednesday evening. After a very interesting business session, the meeting was turned over to the program committee who had secured some very fine talent for the entertainment of the members and visitors. Miss Williams presented her harmonica band which was received most enthusiastically by the audience. Miss Amy Elliott offered a medley of popular songs on the piano, later accompanied her sister, Miss Dorothy Elliott, who rendered a beautiful vocal solo, Mr. David Robinson and Miss Dorothy Elliott sang two fine numbers and were accompanied by Miss Leona Melanson at the piano. Little Miss Ruth Westover surprised the audience with her ability when she presented a piano solo. Miss Janet Westover kept the meeting in laughter with several exceptionally well executed readings.

Darlene Edgerton and Phoebe Taylor delighted the audience with timely and appropriate recitations. The evening was brought to a close with refreshments served by the committee and every one felt they had an evening well spent. The Wintersteen Hill P. T. A. should be congratulated on their splendid growth and the neighborly spirit they promote in their community.
