MATULKA FAMILY SUFFERS WHEN HOUSE BURNS DOWN

A defective flue was responsible for the causing of a fire at the Frank Matulka home, near Dwight, last Thursday evening, that resulted in the complete destruction of the house and practically all of the contents. One of the children, in the yard, saw the flames, just as they broke through the roof and a great effort was made to check the blaze. The fire was thought to be under control several times but would get a new start and finally gained such headway that the house was doomed. There being no telephone in the house, it was necessary for some of the family to run half a mile to a neighbor to sound the alarm and help arrived too late to be of much assistance. The Matulkas will rebuild their home immediately and they are emphatic in stating that telephone service will be installed as soon as possible and kept where it will be available in case of another urgent need.—Valparaiso Journal.

Sustains Loss By Fire.

On last Sunday at the home of Will H. Kruger there was a serious fire which threatened for a time to destroy both the house and the goods of Mr. Kruger but the prompt assistance of the neighbors and the Nehawka fire department saved the home and the contents. The fact of having the neighbors and also the fire fighting department and of which Mr. Kruger is a member himself is a fine insurance to the homes and is also the protection of the companies who carry the risks.

Please Accept Our Thanks.

We desire to express our thanks for the very kind action in the saving of our home and goods, when the fire fiend seemed sure to destroy both. The neighbors who were near rendered the very best service and later when the fire department arrived they also did good work. We wish to extend our sincere thanks for the kindly feeling and excellent work of both neighbors and the Nehawka fire department.—W. H. Kruger and wife.

Must be Wet or Dry on Repeal Question

Attitude of Anti-Saloon League Announced by Supt. McBride—Checkup on Congress.

Washington, March 21.—F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, in a statement Sunday night said the league will regard as wet all votes cast in congress for submitting repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the people. McBride also said neither major political party could afford to place a repeal or modification plank in its national platform. His statement follows:

"An analysis of the prohibition rollcall in the house last week and a study of its effects on the future wet and dry fight indicate the following definite developments:

"The question of proposing a resolution to repeal the eighteenth amendment will be the decisive issue in many congressional districts. The Anti-Saloon league will adhere to its previously announced position that a vote in favor of submitting repeal to the states would be a wet vote and neither legally nor logically a vote for referendum. The classification of all house votes for submission as wet shows that the anti-prohibition forces consider such votes as favorable to their program, thus making the issue clearcut. Not all of the 187 members of the house who voted for the parliamentary motion to permit a vote on repeal are wet. However, the crystallization of the issue by the rollcall will give the voters in the congressional districts an opportunity to learn the attitude of each candidate on maintenance or repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

"Neither party can afford to place a repeal or modification plank in its national platform. The equal division between the parties of the house wet and dry votes proves that neither party can afford to advocate modification or repeal as a party principle. On constitutional prohibition each party will be compelled to take the stand that this question is one for non-partisan decision in congressional and legislative districts. National party planks on prohibition can properly deal with a policy of enforcement of whatever law may be in the constitution its candidates, if elected, will be sworn to support.—State Journal.

Wheat Farmers Need Not Fear a Soviet Surplus

Setting Seen on Russia's Sun as a Heavy Exporter This Year—Big Surplus in U. S.

Washington, March 21.—Candle burning in the windows of American wheat farmers for the return of world markets are flickering the brighter at the setting of Russia's sun as a wheat exporter. It means a chance that part of the overflow from their bulging granaries may find its way abroad, sending home in its place needed cash to pay the doctor, the tax man and the harness maker.

News from the soviet is meager. Nevertheless, government officials here express confidence that the days of Russia—her crop withered by the tricks of weather—are numbered as a shipper, throwing the world's buying counters open to international bidding. Two other encouraging factors have appeared: Stocks in European importing countries are low and milling restrictions, regulating the amount of foreign wheat which may enter, have been lessened. This indicates to the agriculture department observers a budding improved demand.

However, bright as these trade features are, the United States may be the last to notice their benefits.

American wheat is selling at prices higher than those prevailing in Canada, Argentina and Australia. And furthermore those countries have an advantage in lowered currency rates. Heavy shipments to Europe are going forward from the southern hemisphere. Orders for North American wheat are few. The demand, nevertheless, is expected to swing to include takings of the higher quality North American product.

One agriculture department official this week put it this way: The only bearish factor in the world wheat situation is the large amount of stocks in North America—Canada and the United States. Russia, crowned again in 1930 as the king of wheat growers, suffered both from too little rain and too much rain in its spring wheat areas last year. Since January 1, its exports have steadily declined. In contrast to 65 million bushels loaded from August through December, only four million bushels were shipped in January and February. Its total crop—both winter and spring—is now known. Another unknown factor in the situation is the size of Russia's last year carryover, although this is believed to have been largely used.—State Journal.

LANDS BILL IS OPPOSED

Washington.—W. B. Greeley of Seattle, the only member of the president's public lands committee who refused to sign its report, testified before the house lands committee against the bill based on those findings. Formerly head of the forest service, Greeley objected chiefly to the lack of definite recognition of that service in the plan under which surface rights of the lands would be turned over to the states.

Urging "building up from policies previously established," Greeley said the first step in dealing with the public domain should be a readjustment of national forest boundaries with a view to taking in lands adapted to the forest system of control. Greeley said he personally thought the forest service system of administration could well be applied to all the lands. Greeley objected to state commissions having sole power of the readjustment of forest boundaries, as provided in the bill, declaring the president should review all decisions.

Two Morrill Bandits Leave Loot in Flight

Man Questioned in Wyoming About First National Bank Holdup Involving $3,000.

Guernsey, Wyo.—One man was arrested Monday night by Plattsmouth officers and two others were sought for questioning in connection with a bank holdup at Morrill, Neb.

Henry Fallone, thirty-five, of Guernsey, was detained by Sheriff Vic White. Officers said he would be questioned for Nebraska officers. After Fallone's arrest Sheriff White left to question a ranch hand working near here. Three men, officers said, abandoned a machine on the highway near here and they were believed to have been connected with the robbery.

Morrill.—Two men robbed the First National bank at noon Monday of $3,000, were compelled to abandon their loot, and escaped. As they entered the bank, one approached the cage of W. J. Cline, bookkeeper. Shielding his pistol from the view of three customers, he forced Cline to accompany him to the vault, while the other gunman guarded the door. Cline said that as they entered the vault, the armed man ordered him to empty all available money into a burlap bag. After Cline emptied all available cash into the bag, the robber instructed him to stay in the vault and not give an alarm.

Apparently confused as his companion left the vault, the gunman guarding the door fired a bullet which lodged in the wall. Using his pistol, the second robber struck down J. N. Hudson, seventy, believing Hudson a customer, was trying to pursue.
