Gets Badly Bruised

J. D. Cross, who was a visitor in Lincoln with D. O. Dwyer, of Plattsmouth, and Mr. C. M. Chrisweiser, had a very exciting and painful experience while returning in the car of Mr. Dwyer in the evening. One of the rear tires picked up a sharp piece of wood on the road, which penetrated the casing and let the air out very rapidly, precipitating the car and its occupants into the ditch at the roadside. A more complete account of the accident, which cost the life of Mr. Chrisweiser, appears elsewhere in this issue of the Journal. Suffice to say here, Messrs. Dwyer and Cross were both badly bruised and injured when the car rolled over. The occupants were taken to Nehawka, and Glen Rutledge brought Mr. Cross to his home, while another motorist took Mr. Dwyer to his home in Plattsmouth. THE LABORER'S PSALM

Hoover is my Shepherd and I am in want. He maketh me to lie down on park benches. He leadeth me beside great need. He restoreth my doubt in the republican party.

He leadeth me in the path of destruction for his party's sake; Yea, though I walk through the Valley of Starvation, I do fear evil, for Thou art against me. Thy politicians and profiteers, they frighten me.

Thou prearest a reduction in my salary in the presence of mine debtors. Thou annoiest my income with taxes; my expenses run over my income.

Surely unemployment and poverty will follow me all the days of the republican administration and I will dwell in a rented house forever.

Union Residents Seek to Stop State Cutting Trees

Residents of Cass County Protest Destruction of Cedar Trees Planted in Early Day.

Judge Munger granted seventeen Cass county residents from near Union, a temporary restraining order Tuesday against the state department of agriculture, to keep the department from cutting down their cedar trees. Hearing on a final injunction was set for May 20.

The petitioners had been notified by Secretary Felton, against whom the suit is directed, that their trees were infected with orange rust and so were menace to orchards in the vicinity and would be cut down. The rust parasite is now operating. Attorney General Sorsensen told the court, and within three weeks the spores now being deposited on tree trunks will be carried by the wind to other trees. Filing of the suit and issuance of the temporary order has already made it too late to do anything this year for protection against rust from these particular trees.

The petitioners say their trees were planted more than thirty years ago, for wind breaks and decoration, and add considerably to the value of their property. They say the law permitting destruction of the trees is unconstitutional, and they want it declared null and void. They say it was framed to benefit a special class, namely persons having orchards of 1,000 trees or more. They say their trees aren't endangering anybody.

The law in question was S. F. 89 in the 1929 legislative session. The agricultural college owns an orchard in Cass county it, was said Tuesday, but it is outside the two mile zone prescribed by the department as dangerous for neighboring orchards. D. O. Dwyer of this city represents the petitioners.

J. Hennings. The guests brought well filled baskets with good things to eat and at midnight the luncheon was spread. Frans, have returned from California, where they went last fall with the expectation of making their future home, if the country and surrounding conditions pleased them. They have returned and expect to make eastern Nebraska their home, and are at present located in Murray. Mac says that California is all right, it is a fine place to live, the climate, the flowers and the sun when it shines are beautiful, but there are other things to go to make a man and his family home that California does not offer at this time. He says that Nebraska never looked so good to him as right now, and it is the garden spot of the world.
