Asks Birth Control on Behalf of Women

Mrs. Margaret Sanger "Pleads for 25,000,000;" Opposition Is Voiced.

Washington, May 19.—Speaking as she said, in behalf of 25 million women of child-bearing age, Mrs. Margaret Sanger, a veteran fighter for her cause, today urged congress to approve a birth control bill.

Wearing her favorite blue with a cluster of blue flowers, she appeared before a house committee in behalf of the Hancock bill, the first such measure to come before the house in half a century. It would amend federal laws to permit dissemination of birth control information by licensed medical sources.

The committee room was crowded as Mrs. Sanger said:

"Forty-seven states permit physicians to give contraceptive advice, but while they can advise orally they must 'bootleg' their supplies."

An Emergency Measure. Representative Hancock (dem., N. C.), the sponsor, made a strong presentation of the "arguments advanced by its proponents," but said he himself had not studied the matter sufficiently to form a conclusive opinion. He argued for it, however, as an emergency measure.

Testifying before the senate judiciary committee on the Hatfield bill to permit dissemination of contraceptive information by physicians, Dr. William Gerry Morgan, past president of the American Medical association, said the legislation was dangerous, that all contraceptive methods have "more or less harmful effect" and that there is no foundation for the charge that doctors are handicapped in dispensing advice to mothers suffering from physical infirmity.

"And God forbid that they should desire to offer it to any others," he added. Morgan said he did not believe the medical profession as a whole favored any such legislation, observing that the Medical association last week refused to endorse this or any other legislation for the same purpose.

Opposed by Economist. Dr. John A. Ryan, economist and social worker, said, "Advocacy of birth prevention as a remedy for poverty diverts attention from measures of economic and social justice. . . . The propaganda for birth prevention . . . helps to continue a cruel injustice to the working classes."

He argued that the present great decline in birth rate already was having harmful effects on this country and that an increase in birth prevention will bring the population to a stationary level even before the 1945-1970 period at which this is now due. In addition to economic arguments, however, Ryan said, "my fundamental objection to this practice is based upon the fact that it is intrinsically and everlastingly immoral."—World-Herald.

Methodists Propose to Cut Pay of Bishops

Expense Allowances Also Are Expected to Be Reduced—No Opposition Expected.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 20.—The economy program of the Methodist general conference extended to episcopal salaries today as the committee on episcopacy placed before the delegates a scale of reductions for both the expenses and salaries of bishops.

The proposal calls for salary decrease of 16 per cent for both general conference and missionary bishops, and for expense allowance cuts which range up to 20 per cent. The date for legislation on the recommendations has not been designated, but no particular opposition to the plan is anticipated.

If approved, the recommendations of the episcopacy committee will effect the following reductions:

The maximum salary of an effective bishop will be cut from the present $7,200 to six thousand dollars, and a missionary bishop will receive five thousand dollars instead of six thousand dollars.

For retired bishops the maximum allowance will be reduced from three thousand dollars to $2,500, and for a retired missionary bishop, from $2,500 to two thousand dollars.

The allowance for episcopal residences, now between $1,500 and two thousand dollars, will be lowered to a scale ranging from $1,250 to $1,800, and the office expense allowance reduced to $1,500.

The only item in the episcopal fund appropriations which the committee recommended remain unchanged with the $1,500 pension allotted annually to the widow of a bishop.—World-Herald.

Experts Investigate Hessian Fly Damage

Wheat Is Infected in Various Degrees—Nothing Can Be Done at Present Time.

Reports indicate that farmers are noticing much Hessian fly damage in their wheat. Prof. M. F. Swenk, chairman of the department of entomology says, "Wheat plants sent in have been examined by college entomologists who have found varying amounts of infestation."

The variation in degree of infestation brings up the old problem of whether or not to abandon winter wheat land in favor of corn, cane, or sudan grass. No one can answer for the individual farmer, Swenk believes. The farmer must consider the stand of wheat he has on the field, acreage of corn, wheat, oats and other crops on his place, how well fixed he is to handle other grain or forage crops should be plow up the wheat, and similar problems of farm management.

P. H. Stewart and D. L. Gross, extension service agronomists, have inspected fields around Lincoln and in the south central part of the state. They report that in some of the fields the fly will cut down the yield of wheat per acre very materially. Where fields are found to be very heavily infested, and the plans are already stunted, Stewart and Gross recommend that the wheat be plowed or disked and the land put to other crops. Corn planted between now and the first of July should mature in a normal season. Cane and sudan grass can be planted in June and still make forage.

Nothing can be done now to control the Hessian fly or to cut down the damage it will do. Keeping down volunteer wheat and delaying seeding in the fall until after the egg laying season of the fly is over are the only practical means of preventing fly damage, Professor Swenk says.

FARMERS LOSE TRACTOR GAS TAX SUIT

Lincoln, May 30.—The Nebraska supreme court Friday upheld the validity of the amended gasoline tax law which assessed the 4-cent tax on all gasoline brought into the state regardless of how it is to be used.

The 1931 legislature amended the law to prevent any evasion of the tax. The case went to the high court on the appeal of G. E. Burke and a group of farmers. They filed the original case in Lancaster county district court to enjoin State Treasurer T. W. Bass from collecting the tax on gasoline shipped into Nebraska for specific use by the farmers, who arranged the shipment for use in their tractors and not for resale.

The group brought a carload of gasoline to Gurley, Neb., from Tyler, Tex., and announced they would use it only in their tractors for farming. Burke had sought an injunction to prevent the state from taxing the carload of gasoline.

The appellants based their claim upon the contention the original package gasoline was exempt as interstate commerce.

The court affirmed the decision of the Holt county district court in refusing to designate a trust fund money set aside by the officers of the failed Nebraska State bank of O'Neill for a new bank building and other purposes.

For a half hour he was closeted with Police Chief Brex, who, after his departure, termed the visit "purely a friendly one, with no connection with the Lindbergh case."

U. S. TO PAY FOR LIGHT

York.—Hagood airport here, after being dark for ten nights, will be lighted hereafter at government expense, officers of the York County commercial club announce. The federal government has agreed to pay the bill as the field is listed as an emergency landing place for mail planes.

Mrs. C. A. Rosencrans, state president of the American Legion Auxiliary, departed this morning for Lincoln where she will present the award at the annual field day of the University R. O. T. C. She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Egenberger, who will spend the day at the Booth home in Lincoln.
