There still are a lot of wives who think it is just as important to have their husband's love as it is to have clothes that are up-to-date.

These are the days when a man is afraid to go home after his golf clubs for fear his wife will realize beating rugs is just as good exercise as golf.

The Cherokee Indians of North Carolina, it is reported, train all twin babies for careers as witches. Elsewhere in our country such training is given only to those of the female sex.

Successful gardening, avers a home magazine contributor, is just the capacity for taking pains. And that would be all right with us, too, if so many of them weren't in the so many of the back.

A Wisconsin man, who drank some impure water from a spring sixty-nine years ago and has not tasted water since, died at the age of 101. The cause of death is not given in the news item, but it undoubtedly was "something he et."

Senator Borah is going to take no part in the national campaign this year. There is always a certain group who become alarmed at announcements like that, wherein Babe Ruth, Senator Borah, Al Simmons and others are introduced as holdouts. However, even Heine Meine, the champion holdout of all time, signed up to pitch for the Pirates again Sunday. And so we're not worrying about Senator Borah.

Congress is going to give Wall Street a thorough investigation, but we'll bet it won't be as thorough as the cleaning Wall Street gave the public.

Following the general tendency to exaggerate, a newspaper writer says: "The late Ivar Krueger, the match king, died penniless and owing 168 million dollars." No man who can owe 168 millions is penniless.

Mr. Capone says it's "funny justice" that puts a man in prison eleven years for not paying his income taxes. Perhaps, but not nearly so funny as the justice that permits the acquisition of a taxable income by Mr. Capone's methods.

People are really economizing now more than ever. A woman heard that postage stamps were going to be 3 cents each and she asked the postmaster to sell her 500 before they went up. When convinced she would gain nothing by so doing, she did not make the purchase.

Democratic leaders' resentment of Huey Long's clownish service in the senate is based partly upon his refusal to wait the customary two years before making a fool of himself. There is this to be said, however, of Huey's haste—he didn't keep the country in suspense.

The lad who marries a pretty face, and a lot of "it," gets all the congratulations on the wedding day, but the wise boy who marries a sweet disposition is the one who can celebrate the wedding anniversaries with 100 per cent enthusiasm.

"I am only a music lover, not a critic," broadcasts a local lady, "but my worst fears were confirmed the other day, when I heard a would-be singer add to his crimes by announcing that he would sing his own composition with the consent of the copyright owner, 'himself.'"

What is more fun than to rise early on a sunny morning, collect the family and the lunch baskets, and start out on the broad highway for an outing, and the first thing you see at the foot of the hill is a big signboard reading: "After the wreck call Blank for frame and body work?"

We have lived long enough to come from under a delusion of our youth that handsome, dashing young men would hold out that way forever. Some of the finest looking youth we knew in the days of our youth are now just old, ugly mugs like the rest of us, maybe with a little bit of rheumatism and nearly bald-headed.

The Indianapolis News warns us of the imminence of the campaign orator who says doubtlessly and irrefragably. And there's nothing much to do about it except turn off your radio and read the newspapers. The newspapers employ a special corps of men to render political utterances grammatical before they are allowed to appear in print.

Senator Norris expresses deep indignation, notwithstanding that he has been twenty years in congress, because an assistant postmaster general urged a group of postmasters to get out and work for Hoover's reelection. The Nebraska senator adheres sternly to his belief that it is possible to eliminate politics from politics. The only surprising thing in this case is that a postmaster general would think postmasters had to be urged.

THE WORST WASTE IS UNEMPLOYMENT

Of all the astronomical figures that were in fashion at the close of the war none seem more absurd and fantastic in the light of experience than the enormous capital losses computed by some statisticians from the death of some six million soldiers. In the main they were young men. But for the war they might have lived long and useful lives. It seemed tempting to statisticians to assume that if these victims of the war had survived they would have worked steadily for the rest of their days and to set down their potential earnings as part of the war bill. The reality has been very different. If the six million were to rise from the dead what could be done with them? The unemployed in the world are already estimated at from 20 to 25 million; employers and governments would despair if more millions were added. The violent and untimely death of the six million was an unutterable tragedy, but the effort to express the magnitude of the loss in francs or dollars was grotesque at the time and now is seen to have no relation to reality. The world's worst waste is unemployment, and that, too, is incapable of being measured in terms of money. What is running to waste when millions of willing workers are unemployed is human life. Man's working days are few enough at best, and his happiness and welfare depend more on his use of them than on any other one thing. Unemployment exists terrifically in a monetary sense, and no economies can offset the catastrophic shrinkage in the production of wealth when millions of workers are idle. But whether the world is rich or poor matters less than whether the people living in it are so placed that they can live happy and useful lives. Time is a one-way street; there is no recovery of years that he locust has eaten. The world's present experience should make an end of the notion that employment is but an incident of the economic system instead of its corner stone. Some economists hold that the world recycles its wealth every seven years or so; that is all very well for the world which measures its age by billions of years, but the life of man is too short for such calculations. The plain fact is that millions of lives are threatened with ruin, and that existing conditions are in some ways, as a great jurist says, "worse than war." No other kind of extravagance compares in wastefulness with the enforced idleness of a great part of the world's workers.—Springfield Republican.

U. S. IS WORLD'S BANKER

The United States continues to play banker to the world. As the largest of all creditors, this country has approximately 18 billion dollars invested in foreign securities. London, making rapid progress, back to a major position in world banking circles, still lags far behind New York, where the center of money continues to exist. There seems no likelihood now that any nation henceforth will eclipse this country in such matters unless there is at some future time a change of heart on the part of international bankers who have been responsible for the huge sums loaned abroad.

Strangely enough it is not Germany, as most people suppose, but Canada that owes us most money. However, Europe as a whole is our largest debtor, figures compiled by the government indicating that there have been bought and floated in this country nearly five billion dollars of European securities in the last few years. Against this Canada alone owes us some 2,500 million dollars and other debtor nations Germany, with 1,500 million dollars; Cuba with 1,000 million dollars; South America with $3,941,926,000 and scattered loans that bring the grand total to near the 18 billion dollar mark.

With so much money owed to us it is not strange that foreign nations have turned more to themselves for their existence; and that resentment against American money circles has grown in recent years. It has been these enormous debts, too, that have in large measure spurred countries owing us to erect prohibitive tariff barriers in retaliation to the high import levies we collect. With so much money owed to us and so little chance of the debtor nations being able to pay us soon, a primary reason may be found for current world unrest and depression. Debt weighs down nations no less than individuals.—Ohio State Journal.

JAPAN STAYS MODERN

The threat that reactionary elements in Japan would take advantage of the political crisis created by the assassination of Premier Takeuchi Inukai to obtain control of the government, seems to have been averted for the moment, at least, by the appointment of a new "national" cabinet under Admiral Viscount Makato Saito. Despite his naval rank, Admiral Saito is said to be politically a liberal. Indeed, he appears to have advantages not unlike those of President Paul von Hindenburg in Germany. In view of his record as an officer, the patriotic militarists are not in a position to attack his motives, while his political career has won the confidence of the Japanese who believe in domestic government. The new premier has been able to induce the two major political parties to co-operate with him and has formed a cabinet in which both are represented, along the lines of the National government in Great Britain. Observers report that not much change is to be expected in Japanese foreign policy, as a result of this development, and that the Manchurian enterprise will be continued. But it at least has prevented the government from falling into the hands of men who would like to see Japan return to her old imperialistic isolation. A certain danger persists and probably will persist, as long as economic conditions play into the hands of the reactionaries. But the forces of modern, representative government apparently have united at last for the preservation of their ideals.

SHIP BOMBER SUSPECT PARTIALLY IDENTIFIED

London, May 27.—The man arrested in New York after a 13-year search as Fritz Albert Duquesne, erstwhile spy and soldier of fortune, "appears to be the suspect wanted by Britain for murder on the high seas," it was stated authoritatively in government circles Friday. Duquesne has been sought in connection with the death of three men aboard the British steamer Tenyson in South American waters. They were killed in an explosion of bombs, designed as motion picture films, alleged to have been taken aboard the boat by Duquesne. Efforts to find witnesses to the tragedy are being made.

A TRANSPORTATION ACT OF 1933?

A thoroughgoing revision and clarification of the Transportation Act of 1920 is necessary, leading traffic, financial and legal executives of railroads assert. The view is shared by members of congress, and apparently by members of the Interstate Commerce Commission. With this impetus, it appears either that there will be a Transportation Act of 1932 or 1933 replacing in whole the former one, or that several bits of independent legislation will serve to correct the inadvertencies now seen in the act under which the railways have functioned for twelve years.

With Senator Cummins and Representative Esch drew up that act, it represented a symposium which was hailed as the most constructive railroad legislation ever enacted. The framers of the act planned well, but they could not foresee basic changes in transportation affairs which have subsequently vitiated the most important factors in the act.

For example, they planned that one-half of all rail earnings above 6 per cent should be repaid to the Government, to be lent to needy carriers. In twelve years the total sum thus earned is $360,000,000, of which only $10,000,000 has been paid into the government coffers. Now it is proposed not only to repeal that recapitulative clause, but to make the repeal retroactive by refunding such moneys as have been paid in. Another subject needing clarification is the clause which requires rates to be "reasonably compensatory." Rail officers, eager to quote competitive tariffs, have come to construe this as meaning anything above the out-of-pocket costs, while the Interstate Commerce Commission believes it to mean a reasonable return above operating costs.

The section comprising the famous long-and-short-haul clause should be repealed entirely as argued by some tariff experts, who feel that the transcontinental railroads should not be barred from the opportunity of reducing their rates so that they may compete with the intercoastal water carriers for the coast-to-coast business. These men aver that other sections of the present act preclude any discrimination.

A curb upon railroad holding companies already is in prospect through report of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce which would place these companies under jurisdiction of the commission in the same category as common carriers. The motor carrier bill is the final subject warranting early consideration, in order that the huge investment in the railways may not be jeopardized by unequal competition from truck and bus lines, which now function with but the slightest degree of public regulation.

ROSS TALKS ON RAIL RATE

Kansas City.—C. A. Ross, rate expert for the Nebraska railway commission, testified at a grain freight rate hearing here that the railroads had overestimated their prospective losses under a schedule which took effect last August but later was disallowed by the United States supreme court. Ross said the loss in revenue to the railroads under that schedule would be $7,000,000 annually instead of $20,000,000 as contended by the carriers.

He pointed out that while the schedule, which the grain interests are seeking to have reinstated, called for reductions in Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma, the rates were raised in other states. Turning to Nebraska, Ross said whereas the rates on grain under the disallowed schedule were reduced $800,000 annually those for livestock were raised $500,000 and less than carload merchandise rates were raised $800,000.

REFeree's SALE

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of judgment in partition entered on the 20th day of February, 1932, confirming the partition of the estate of Humphrey Murphy, plaintiff, vs. Joseph P. Murphy, Margaret Murphy, Edward W. Murphy, Agnes Murphy, Bradford J. Murphy, Margaret Murphy, Catherine Wonder, Charles J. Wonder, and Ershal Murphy, then pending in the District Court of Cass County, Nebraska, wherein the undersigned was appointed referee to partition the land involved in said action; upon report of the referee that physical partition of the land could not be made without great prejudice to the parties it was thereupon ordered and adjudged by the court that said land be sold and the proceeds thereof be divided into shares between the parties as theretofore determined. Pursuant to said judgment of the court, the undersigned referee will on the 23rd day of June, 1932, at ten o'clock a. m., of said day at the south front door of the court house in Plattsmouth, in said county, sell the said real estate, to-wit: The SE 1/4 and the N 1/2 of the NE 1/4 of Sec. 20, Twp. 11, North Range 12, east of the 6th P. M., in Cass County, Nebraska, at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, ten per cent of the bid to be paid at the time of the sale and the balance of the purchase money to be paid upon completion of sale and making deed by referee. Said sale will be made subject to a mortgage in the sum of $1,842.12, with interest from Jan 1, 1932 at 5 1/2 per cent, on the Lincoln Joint Stock Land Bank on the N 1/2 of the NE 1/4 of Sec. 20, Twp. 11, North Range 12. Dated this 23rd day of May, 1932. J. A. CAPWELL, Referee. D. O. DWYER, W. L. DWYER, Attorneys. m23-4w

How Old?

He doesn't look a day over fifty. And feels like forty. At the age of 62. That's the happy state of health and pep a man enjoys when he gives his vital organs a little stimulant! When your system is stagnant and you feel sluggish, headachy, half-alive—don't waste money on "tonics" or "regulators" or similar patent medicines. Stimulate the liver and bowels. Use a famous physician's prescription every drug store keeps. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

But if you want to keep in fine shape, feel fit the year 'round, take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin every few days. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better. You will never need another laxative. Give the children a little of this delicious syrup two or three times a week. A gentle, natural stimulant that makes them eat and keeps the bowels from clogging. And saves them from so many sick spells and colds. Have a sound, stomach, active liver and strong bowel muscles that expel every bit of waste and poison every day! Just keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin on hand; take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. See if you don't feel new vigor in every way.
