Picnic at Garrison Grove

Dan Lynn Celebrates Birthday
On June sixth, 1851, Daniel Lynn was born in the state of Ohio, where with his parents he resided for the first year of his life. They moved to Illinois in the spring of 1852, where they settled on a farm near South Auburn. Here they farmed for some seven years and in 1859 moved to Nebraska, settling on a farm north of Union. Mr. Lynn has practically made his home here during his life though for a time he resided in Filmore county and for a short time in Otoe county. He has been making the home in Union with the good wife for the past many years and has with each recurring summer made a home at Kamp Kill Kare. Here he resided until last summer, then abandoned the place and has made his home in Union all the year round.

On the passing of his natal day uncle Daniel with the good wife remained at home where they quietly passed the day enjoying the home cheer. He had many remembrances from all parts of the union, many coming from California, among which was a crate of nutmegs, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the couple. The Journal with the many friends are extending congratulations to both uncle Daniel Lynn and his good wife, and are hoping that they may yet live to enjoy many happy years together.

To Have Clothing Exhibit.
An exhibit of children's clothing will be on display at the Farm Bureau office Monday evening and Tuesday, June 13 and 14. This exhibit will be of special interest to local leaders of girls clothing clubs of this county and to mothers of small children. The exhibit came from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It was secured by Miss Allegra Wilkens, assistant state extension agent in boys and girls club work at the agricultural college at Lincoln.

The exhibit includes play suits, sun suits, and sun suit ensembles for girls and boys, dresses for little girls, infants wear, and rompers for creeping babies. Freedom and comfort for active children, encouragement of self help and the saving of the mother's time and some washable woolens.

The staff of the division of textiles and clothing in the Bureau of Home Economics, Washington, D. C., designed the garments. The bureau does not distribute patterns for the garments, but several pattern manufacturers have adopted the designs and put the patterns on the market.

4-H clothing club girls in part of their regular problems make garments for their younger brothers and sisters or to children of some other family.

June 16 Is Poultry Field Day.
A program of talks and educational demonstrations has been arranged for the annual poultry field day June 16 at the Agricultural College, Lincoln. The opening talk will be given by Prof. H. C. Filley, chairman of the rural economics department of the college, at 9:30.

The vocational agriculture class of Eagle high school under the direction of R. M. Kildee will present a dialog and demonstration on "How to keep the hen's board bill down." B. F. Preston of Lincoln will discuss the production of capons from his own experience. Turkey raising is becoming an important activity on many Nebraska farms, and E. J. Polnick of Red Cloud will talk about the summer management of growing turkeys, with Bernard Augustine of Stuart, Neb., will discuss the marketing of turkeys.

Prof. F. E. Mueschel will tell the visitors about some new information from recent experiments. Following the greetings by Dean W. W. Burr immediately after lunch, the afternoon program will include a tour of the poultry farm to see the results of some recent feeding experiments, a demonstration of methods of grading and packing eggs, handling pullets on the range, a practical roosting shed for turkeys, a rainproof and waste proof bungalow feeder for chickens and turkeys, and culling and caponizing demonstrations.

Visitors are welcome to any or all of the program for the day.

Business will improve only as we contribute to its improvement by exercising our purchasing power.

the average value of the product from each cow was $124.45. The average feed cost was $56.89, leaving an average income over feed cost of $67.56 per cow. The 334 cows averaged eating 7954 pounds of roughage, such as hay, silage and corn fodder and 2984 pounds of grain. For each $10.00 worth of feed the cow returned $2.29 in produce.

Most of these farmers feed feeds grown on their own farm with the exception of some protein supplement, such as cottonseed meal or linseed meal. Their home grown feeds as well as pasture were charged to the cows at market prices.

Even though the price of butterfat has been exceptionally low, two of these cows would be a market machine for the home grown grains and pay $56.00 per month for milking them. The average milk cow in the state produces less than one half this amount of butterfat in a year. Supposing a cow produced 200 pounds of fat in a year, her feed cost would be about $50.00 and the value of the product about $65.00. You would then receive about $15.00 per month for milking her. The point in this comparison is that one cannot afford to keep a cow at present prices unless she produces about 300 pounds of fat. How do you know what she produces? The only way to find out is to keep a monthly test record.

Crops Field Day June 21
The annual crops field day is to be held June 21 at the Extension Station in Lincoln. Talks in the morning and a field trip to see the experimental farm east of Havelock in the afternoon will make up the day's program.

P. H. Stewart, extension agronomist will open the morning program at 9:30 with a discussion of lespedeza, Grohoma, flax, pop corn, soybeans, field beans, sand vetch, cowpeas, and hulls oats which he says are uncommon crops farmers often ask about. "Weeds and How to Kill Them" is the feature of the forenoon program. Honor Gelsner of Madison, Neb., will tell how he kills weeds with a rotary hoe. The second topic is killing of weeds by summer fallow. D. L. Gross of the Agronomy extension service will discuss the use of chemicals on weeds.

Arthur Anderson of the Agronomy department will explain why the barley acreage of Nebraska has increased 400 per cent in five years. G. F. Eberspacher, a farmer living near Seward, will answer the question, "Why did so much winter wheat kill out?" C. A. Suneson of the Agronomy department will lead the discussion following Eberspacher's talk.

O. S. Bare, extension entomologist and Prof. J. C. Russel of the agronomy department will close the morning program with a talk on "Soil Management Practices That Save Money." Paul Tafert, Webster county agent, will lead the discussion following Russel's talk.

Experiments showing comparisons of small grain varieties, comparisons of seeding dates, comparisons of seedbed preparation methods, and tests under way with alfalfa, crop rotations and fertilizers will be inspected as the last part of the day's program.

Field, Murphy May Fight on Wet-Dry Issue

Shenandoahan's Lead Mounts Over Senator Brookhart as the Count Nears End.

Des Moines, Ia., June 7.—Returns today in the senatorial contests in Iowa's state primaries made it probable that the prohibition issue will raise its head when the state elects a senator next November.

Henry Field of Shenandoah, republican, and a dry, and Louis Murphy of Dubuque, outspoken democratic foe of prohibition, apparently were assured of the nominations in their respective parties.

Murphy's slogan in the intensive campaign which preceded the Monday primary war, "I am a wet," and his fight for the nomination centered around this issue.

A wet-dry fight would be a decided change from the issues of the primary in which Field, colorful radio station operator and seed dealer, contested with Senator Smith W. Brookhart and four other candidates for the republican senatorial nomination.

"Stew or Bologna." One of the features of this contest, Field contended in a stumping tour, was the Field chicken stew as opposed to what he referred to as the "Brookhart bologna."

The apparent defeat of Brookhart, arch enemy of Wall street and big business, was the outstanding feature of the primaries. The senator was not ready to concede defeat late today, although he was trailing Field by a vote of about 3 to 4 in the late returns.

With 2,293 of the state's 2,435 precincts reporting, Field had 183,765 votes to 137,386 for Brookhart. The four other entrants were trailing far behind the leaders. Field's vote was well above the 35 per cent required to nominate.

The other candidates stood: Glenn Haynes, 40,261; George Cosson, 25,956; Louis Cook, 11,879, and L. E. Eickelberg, 8,445.—World-Herald.

VOTE MORE ARMY OFFICERS
Washington.—The senate appropriations committee decided the army needed 2,000 more officers than the 10,000 the house thought it should have, but overlooked for a time the point of providing money for their salaries. To correct this error, the bill, carrying nearly 300 millions was rushed off the floor and back to the committee at the request of Senator Reed who is in charge of it. The $27,200,927 the house provided for pay was raised to $31,833,427 and the bill returned to the senate.

Reductions in the pay items set aside for retirement in the house bill, and other resultant necessary charges, made the net increase for salaries $3,784,414 that the committee had failed to account for in first reporting the measure. As the bill came from the house, it carried $292,556,146, which was reduced by the senate committee to $288,573,512, as it stood after being corrected. This was $21,785,249 under the estimates for the fiscal year 1933, and $56,194,722 under the 1932 appropriations. The largest single reduction was a slash of $5,722,510 for rivers and harbors work.
