Bible School Lesson Study! Sunday, September 4th By L. Neitzel

"Evils of Intemperance" Isaiah 5:11-16, 22, 23.

The author of this lesson is known to most Bible students at the "Evangelist of the Old Testament." A little sketch of this great man might be of interest. He lived during the reign of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah and even into the reign of Manasseh, 743 to 618 B. C. He was married and his wife was called a prophetess. Called to his mission in the last year of Uzziah (Chap. 6), and according to tradition suffered martyrdom by being sawn asunder (Heb. 11:37). His style of writing is at once elegant and sublime, forcible and ornamental. In his sentiments there is uncommon elevation and majesty; in his imagery the utmost propriety, elegance, dignity and diversity; in his language uncommon beauty and energy, clearness and simplicity. So much more fully and clearly does he predict the Messiah and describe His kingdom than any other prophet, that he is styled "the Evangelical Prophet." His chief prophecies are the captivities and the ruin of various nations. But his Messianic predictions are of the greatest importance. The whole life of Christ is found in his book.

From this lesson we learn the harm of strong drink to body, mind, soul, home and nation. Intemperance has cursed the world since Noah's time, and has been condemned by God, and the hills that follow its use pointed out; and men that have the well-being of their fellowmen at heart, have lifted up their voices against this demon, that has more victims and sorrow and misery to its credit than all the wars and diseases that have decimated nations. And still we have men, and women (to their shame it must be said) who defend this monster and would bring it back to debauch our youth, corrupt politics, and send men staggering into a drunkard's hell. If we inquire what lifts these people to action, we find the answer in verse 23, "for a bribe," i. e. for money.

The sin, with its concomitants and connections is described in the text: (1) The prophet refers to intemperance and its associate habits of festivity and dissipation—it is both bad in principle and degrading to character. It has a greater tendency than almost any other to destroy the feeling of shame and to harden conscience, it leads to other great sins, it is dangerous to the peace of society and puts to hazard the lives of men; (2) The prophet points out the connection between intemperance, unhalloved festivity and an infidel disregard of the works of God. The "woes" denounced by the prophet upon the sons and daughters of intemperance. Learn here that habits of intemperance are progressively formed. Beware of the first step, of the first temptation, of the first immoderate indulgence. Six "woes" are pronounced in the fifth chapter against men that use and favor strong drink; the judgments of God will come slowly but sure. First "woe," against the selfish, who add house to house, field to field, and deprive many of a home. (Verses 8-10). The second "woe" against those who indulge in the flowing bowl and a frivolous and careless life, disregarding God and his works. (Verses 11-17). The third "woe" against those profane and blasphemous men who dare God to punish them. (Verses 18-19). The fourth "woe" against those who willfully distort the truth. (Verse 20). The fifth "woe" against those who are proudly self-confident—those who defy self, count Divine guidance and wisdom to be wholly unnecessary. (Verse 21). The sixth "woe" against the judiciary, who will not prosecute evildoers, accept bribes, pervert justice. Drunkenness incapacitates judges for the discharge of their official functions, but tempts them to make a trade of justice, with a view to the indulgence of the appetite. (Verses 22, 23). The slogan "safety first" should be replaced by "sober first," then safety is practically assured. There is as much place in business for alcohol as for sand in an engine.

While the liquor traffic is directly destructive, demoralizing, the most deadly havoc it wreaks upon a nation is in the degeneracy it inflicts upon so many of its citizens, seriously lowering the average standard of character and conduct. As alcoholic degeneracy progresses in a man, he becomes less and less a social being. He is increasingly animated by brutal instincts until he becomes at last anti-social and criminal.

God knows best what is good for man; therefore he says: "Touch not, taste not, handle not." (Col. 2:21).
