A typographical error spelled campaign "dampaign," which wasn't so far-fetched, at that.

"Hoover Hasn't Forgotten Us," according to a placard. But, there is no evidence that he ever knew us.

The central Chinese Government is on the verge of bankruptcy. Thus the Chicagoification of China advances.

After becoming partially civilized a Kongo tribe got heavily in debt and took to the jungle again. We can understand that impulse.

The Vallees, after getting a lot of free publicity, have decided to go back together. Suppose some one told them two could live cheaper than one, and the depression did the rest.

It used to be that we would go into a store and have them take down all their shoe boxes in order to fit our feet. Now we go in and see what they have on the bargain counter and fit our feet to the shoes. And it is surprising how adjustable a person's feet can be.

A young lady of 6 is experiencing the wonderful adventure of first days in school. When she got home the other day daddy asked her, "What did you learn at school today?" The reply was prompt and positive, "We learned to sing the 'Battle Hymn of the Republicans.'"

The signatures on many checks received by contributors to the Democratic campaign fund cannot be read by the managers in charge at national headquarters in New York. This certainly confirms the traditional allegation about the reading inability of the Democrats.

Just because science announces the discovery of a larger supply of vitamin A there should be no further outbreak between those old antagonists A and B, who are always betting and arguing. Those rowdy A's may believe they have more vitamins now and start an onslaught on the B's. The battling B's will have to lay in a supply of vitamin B as the best way to meet their ancient enemies.

Safely passing a financial crisis brings an even bigger thrill than safely passing a speeding truck on a narrow road.

Texas Guinan, who "breezed" into Kansas City the other day, said she was a "nice goll." Who are we to question the word of a loidy?

When we can quit cutting the grass we have to start raking up the leaves, but at least that doesn't have to be done every week all through the winter.

A writer says that golfers are rarely moved by scenery. On some links the committee would be content if the scenery were moved more rarely by golfers.

If Senator Brookhart became the leader of the Iowa farm strike he will be a real threat to sheriffs who are trying to keep the roads open. The senator is an expert rifleman.

When the mayor of a large city resigns everyone rejoices, when the mayor of the village quits suddenly that is a catastrophe. What a whale of a difference a few cents make.

It would be a good idea if certain European nations would stop arguing about who caused the last war, and check up on those countries which are likely to cause the next one.

Note to Mr. James Bausch, who is stumping Kansas in behalf of the Democratic ticket: Dear Jim—All is forgiven, old boy, old boy, old boy. This is one time you're playing on the right team.

Mayor Cermak has extended a cordial invitation to European nations, including even England, to take part in the 1933 Century of Progress Exposition. Can you imagine what "Big Bill" Thompson is saying?

Miss Paulette Goddard laughingly confided to Chicago newspaper men that everybody seemed surprised when Charlie Chaplin kissed her good-by. Well, young young lady, you know Charlie has been known to throw pies.

The Soviet government is expelling a young woman writer who exposed methods of the secret police at a prison camp in the timber regions of Northern Russia. Well, what do the Soviet statesmen expect a woman to do with a secret?

The two men indicted after their arrest when policemen found them asleep in a motor car wherein was concealed a bag of counterfeit coins could plead an alibi quite nicely by explaining to the court they were wandering in dreamland when someone left the bad money in their car.

A REAL FIGHT, AFTER ALL

The republican High Command has decided upon a complete change in its campaign plans. That amounts, admittedly, to changing horses while crossing the stream, something they are admonishing us voters we should not and must not do. But needs must when the devil drives.

And the devil is driving hard and fast and furiously. The Maine election proved that. Following on the heels of that disaster adverse reports from all over the country have been pouring in to General Headquarters. Even Iowa is in danger. Even California. Even Pennsylvania! From the whole of Macedonia comes the distracted cry for help.

Therefore the Major Generals and the Brigadier Generals and the Colonels and the General Staff, yes, and the top sergeants, of the High Command have been in feverish conference another three hours. The Field Marshal, Chairman Sanders, spent night the whole day there. Mr. Hoover has been described as alternately moody, sad, and angry. Promptly after the Maine results were announced he sternly called upon Chairman Sanders to do something. And the distracted chairman knew neither what to do nor how to do it.

The trouble is that the campaign hasn't gone according to program. The program was a peach. It was merely to sit tight—or, to use the time-proved formula, stand pat. Let the democrats lose their finger nails in the hopeless attempt to tear down the enormous republican majority. Let the democrats be depended upon to make their usual stupid mistakes. Let Franklin Roosevelt campaign to his heart's content—and lose votes with every speech. The republican leadership, meanwhile, would remain dignified, confident, serene, thereby inspiring confidence everywhere and striking despair to the democratic hosts.

Mr. Hoover would be especially dignified. He would hold himself aloof from the silly campaign. He would stay at the White house, busy with his task of routing the depression. That would have a good effect. If he should make another speech or two, it would be strictly nonpartisan. And that impudent upstart, Franklin Roosevelt, he would blight and wither by ignoring him utterly. Meanwhile General Mills and General Hurley and General Hyde of the cabinet, in default of able volunteers, would do the important speech making. They would do well enough. They would be able, with sneers and jeers and ridicule, to blow Roosevelt out of the water. And all there would be left to do would be to count the republican majority on election night.

A PROSPERITY OF JUSTICE

Once again in his Portland speech on the power question one is impressed by Governor Roosevelt's broad grasp and thorough understanding of public problems, his rare gift for making them understandable by others than experts, and his frank and direct approach to their solution. Where some public men succeed in making a problem muddy or foggy, Roosevelt clarifies it, and clarifies likewise his own attitude toward it. He has convictions, and confidence in his soundness. He makes us feel that if he is elected president, and is given a congress in sympathy with his policies, he will do something affirmative and helpful to solve the problem. He is discussing. He will not be content to muddle along, or hope to muddle through, in the expectancy that "prosperity is just around the corner" and that it was miraculously make our troubles such little ones that we shall not longer notice them.

Besides, Governor Roosevelt, concerned as he is with the restoration of prosperity, is concerned about something more. He is no more content that the big fish should eat the little fish than he would be pleased if the little fish were permitted to eat the big fish. The whole trend of his thought and policy is toward such rules and regulations in our economic structure as will safeguard the fundamental rights and opportunities of all alike. It is not alone a new deal but a square deal he is promoting, and in the conviction that without a square deal there can be no enduring prosperity any more for the big fish than for the little.

As governor of New York Mr. Roosevelt has had some bitter contests with the power interests. They have arisen because of his determination to protect the rights of the people of New York in their own property—the power sites—and their interests as consumers of electricity. But at Portland, no more than as governor, does he present himself in the light of an ogre thirsting for the utilities' blood. He opposed public ownership except in such instances where justice for the consumers cannot otherwise be secured. He recognizes the right of the utilities to earn a fair rate of profit on honest and actual investment. On that basis he believes in private ownership and management, under effective public regulation. He purposes far-reaching plans to make that regulation effective, for the good not alone of consumers but of owners and investors. He would make of utility commissions something more than neutral and pallid quasi-judicial bodies. He would make them what they were intended to be—tribunes and active agents of the people for their protection against private greed. And he holds that "the natural hydro-electric power resources belonging to the people of the United States or of the several states shall remain forever in their possession." The summing up of his policy is sound capitalization, honest management, effective control, and electricity for the people at the lowest cost consistent with fair profits.

In a word, on this as on other questions, Governor Roosevelt stands for what is right and fair and just as among and between all interests concerned. He is not an enemy of business merely because it is big. But he is the determined enemy of dishonesty and chicanery and unrestricted greed in business, big or little. No man, rich or poor, content with what is his honest due, need have any occasion to fear him in the White house. But selfishness and cunning, battenning on special privilege, have good reason to view him with alarm.—World-Herald.

FROM HIGHER TO LOWER OFFICE

I propose that men who have reached the top in public life, who have been President, cabinet officer, governor, should at the end of their terms of office get themselves elected or appointed to less important jobs.

This might have quite astonishing results. For under our present tradition if a man has once been governor he feels it beneath his dignity to run for mayor. A senator won't go back to the house; a congressman won't go back to the state legislature. And, as for an ex-President, apparently there is nothing in public life dignified enough for him to do.

It is an absurd tradition. Lloyd George has been prime minister of England; it does not occur to him that he is too sanctified to sit in the house of commons. But with us a man must either be promoted or he must retire. He cannot go down the ladder and give to the lower offices the benefit of his experience and the prestige of his name.

Yet that precisely is what he ought to do. It is a miserable arrangement of things that during these critical years of the nation's history ex-President Coolidge should have been attending directors' meetings of a life insurance company instead of sitting in the house of representatives or in the cabinet, that ex-Governor Smith should have been running an office building.

It is a sheer waste of talent and an outrage on common sense that men of proved capacity in the public sense that men of proved capacity in the public service and of wide prestige should not be actively in public life when they are so badly needed.—Walter Lippmann in the American Magazine.

Well, the jig is up. We've always dreamed of receiving a nod or beck from the President, the governor, the mayor or maybe just a restrained "how are you, my man," from a councilman or precinct captain. We read that a citizen of New York obtained congratulations from the President and vice-president only after rounding out seventy-one years of employment with one firm and never being late to work.

NOTICE TO DEFENDANTS

In the District Court of Cass County, Nebraska.

To Victor H. Breeden and all persons having or claiming any interest in Lot 796 and the south 135 feet of Lot 797 in Oak Heights Addition to the Village of Louisville, as surveyed, platted and recorded in Cass county, Nebraska, real names unknown (impleaded with others), defendants.

Notice is hereby given that on the 21st day of September, 1932, the Occidental Building and Loan Association, a corporation, filed its petition and commenced an action in the District Court of Cass county, Nebraska, Docket 6, Page Number 75, against the above named and designated defendants, the object and prayer of which are to foreclose a certain mortgage for $4,000.00 on Lot Seven Hundred Ninety-six (796) and the south One Hundred Thirty-five (135) feet of Lot Seven Hundred Ninety-seven (797), in Oak Heights Addition to the Village of Louisville, as surveyed, platted and recorded in Cass County, Nebraska; which was executed on the 21st day of May, 1929, by Sarah Grace Breeden and Victor H. Breeden, as mortgagors, to the plaintiff as mortgagee and which was duly recorded on the 23rd day of May, 1929, in Book 59, at page 449 of the Mortgage Records of Cass county, Nebraska; said mortgage being given to secure the repayment of a certain promissory note or obligation in writing dated May 21, 1929, and plaintiff alleges that there is now due to the plaintiff on said indebtedness the sum of $3,444.67, together with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from September 16, 1932.

Plaintiff prays that it be authorized and directed to apply on the indebtedness secured by said mortgage, the sum of $779.50 paid by the Insurance Company in or toward settlement of the loss or damage of said mortgaged premises by the fire alleged in said petition, and that in default of payment by said defendants or some of them of the amount due the plaintiff as aforesaid, said mortgaged premises may be decreed to be sold according to law to satisfy the sum found due with interest and costs of suit and that said defendants and all persons claiming by, through or under them, or any of them, be excluded from and foreclosed of any and all interest, rights, title and equity of redemption in, or lien upon said mortgaged premises. You and each of you are required to answer said petition on or before the 7th day of November, 1932, at the Occidental Building & Loan Association, a corporation, Plaintiff.
By T. F. WILES, Its Attorney.
