United States Held Prepared to Aid Liberia

Secretary Stimson Says That Government's Help Futile Without Proper Authority.

Washington.—The United States today was declared by Mr. Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, "ready to approve any practicable plan" for international supervision of Liberia's administration, but feels such co-operation would be futile without "an adequate grant of authority" by the African Republic.

"The view of this government in respect to Liberia," Mr. Stimson said, "is simply that any officials sent there in behalf of the League of Nations shall have sufficient assurance of support and authority from both Liberia and the League to make it worth while sending them."

The government's position was set forth by the Secretary of State in a telegram last night to Mr. Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Mr. W. E. B. Du Bois, editor of the Crisis, both of New York City.

Mr. White and Mr. Du Bois contended in a telegram to Mr. Stimson yesterday that the State Department attitude "amounts to a veto" of the League plan for nine foreign officials and a League adviser to supervise Liberia. This plan was suggested after an international commission reported conditions of slavery and forced labor existed there.

If the department does not change its attitude on a question of vital importance to colored voters in the United States we should not be able to avoid attributing its position to the hostility of the Hoover administration to the Negro race," Mr. White and Mr. Du Bois said.

"The remedy suggested by the League," Mr. Stimson replied, "has been supervision of Liberian administration by nonpartisan officials representing the enlightened nations of the world. We have urged only that these officials be promised to advance sufficient authority to make them useful."

White and Dubois said the state department policy would mean "a destructive occupation similar to that which the United States has carried out in another Negro Republic, namely Haiti," and added that the same logic "would lead the present administration to embark upon a unilateral intervention in Liberia's affairs, for the protection of the Firestone interests."

Mr. Stimson's telegram, as made public here, follows, in part: "The United States has no desire or plan to intervene in Liberia, but is seeking to co-operate with the other nations of the world in bringing to an end conditions which have shocked the humanitarian sentiments of the whole civilized globe."

Crum, however, went up the track and flagged the limited. Railroad officials said an iron bar five feet long and two inches thick wired to a rail has been found by the crew. Members of the crew moved the obstruction and reported the incident to railroad police. No arrests were made.

MISS TASHMAN IS RESTING New York.—Oxygen was administered to revive Lilyan Tashman, the actress, after an emergency operation for appendicitis. The wife of Edmund Lowe was hysterical from the effects of the anaesthetic for some time after the operation, but the surgeon said "she is resting easy and is in no imminent danger." Miss Tashman, in a telephone conversation with her husband, told him to remain in Hollywood and continue his work.

FOUND BODY OF SLAIN MAN Burlington, Wis.—Farmers hunting for nuts found the unidentified body of a man in a thicket on Mount Thom, a hill in a wooded region several miles south of here. There were eight bullet wounds on the body. The body lay 100 feet up from the road. Vegetation was not trampled, leading authorities to the conclusion the man was forced by his assassins to walk up the hill. The man, who had been dead about twenty-four hours, apparently was of Italian extraction. On a belt buckle was the initial "J." but there was little else to aid in identification. Sheriff Anderson is investigating a theory that the man was slain in a liquor feud.

OMAHA LOANS AUTHORIZED

Omaha.—Loans to stockmen and farmers may be made by the Omaha branch of the Agricultural Credit corporation, according to word from Washington Friday night to Charles C. Kuning, manager of the branch office here. Kuning said applications began to come in to the office here several days ago and that the branch had been ready for two days to begin making loans.

The exact amount which the Omaha institution may pay out has not yet been set. The potential credit capacity of the branch was estimated, however, at $13,000,000 in announcements from Washington some time ago. The Omaha branch has a temporary office in the First National bank building. A permanent location is to be arranged shortly.

Nominate O'Brien as Walker Puts Self Out of Race

Ex-Mayor Says That Interests of the Party Are Paramount—Word to Curry.

Madison Square Garden, New York, Oct. 6.—Surrogate John P. O'Brien tonight was nominated for mayor of New York by the democratic city convention after it had heard a dramatic message from James J. Walker, aboard an ocean liner in midatlantic, removed his name from consideration. The message was sent to John F. Curry, chief of Tammany Hall.

"I request that my name be withheld from the convention," Walker's message said, "and this decision is based solely on my willingness to put the interests of the party above my personal desires."

The renomination of Walker, who resigned in the midst of ouster hearings before Governor Roosevelt, was vigorously opposed by Roosevelt and by former Governor Alfred E. Smith. O'Brien is a personal friend of Smith.

Earlier in the week, Smith and Roosevelt had won a victory over Curry when he capitulated after opposing the nomination of the present lieutenant-governor, Herbert H. Lehman, for the democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Reveals Offered Nomination. The exchange of radiograms between Walker and Curry revealed that the Tammany chief and John H. McCooey, Brooklyn leader, had offered Walker the mayoralty nomination in the face of Smith-Roosevelt opposition.

"I know the people of my native city share your confidence," said Walker's message, which brought applause from the more than 20 thousand delegates.

"My love for New York City is universally known and I know I could be re-elected by another overwhelming plurality. But is that the only thing to be considered by one who has a profound appreciation of the support he has heretofore received from his party?"

"I cannot see how I could campaign without reciting the reasons for my resignation and without reminding the public of the unfair nature of the hearings conducted by the governor of our state."

"Not Bigger Than Party" "This, in my opinion, would do the democratic ticket no good. Much as I feel aggrieved by the treatment I have received I am not one of those who think he is bigger than his party."

"Rather than jeopardize the hopes of democracy in the nation, which I feel my candidacy might do, I request that my name be withheld from the convention and this decision is based solely upon my willingness to put the interests of the party above my personal desires."

An agreement to put O'Brien up for the remainder of the Walker term, running to the end of 1933, found all five city borough leaders in accord. No one else was placed in nomination.—World-Herald.

Libby is Not Named in Will of Reynolds

Had No Decree from His First Wife When the Document Was Drawn.

New York, Oct. 7.—Smith Reynolds left a will bequeathing 50 thousand dollars to Albert Walker, the friend who is now charged with his murder, but not mentioning his widow, whom he had not married when the will was drawn and who is a co-defendant with Walker. The will was filed for probate late today.

The will was executed late in August of 1931, a few days before he left Long Island for a perilous solo flight to the Far east. It left young Reynolds' share in the tobacco millions largely to his brother, Richard Reynolds, and his two sisters, Mrs. Mary Reynolds Babcock and Mrs. Nancy Reynolds Bagley.

There was 50 thousand dollars listed for Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds, who divorced Reynolds shortly after the will was drawn. 50 thousand dollars for their daughter, Anne Cannon Reynolds, 11, 50 thousand dollars for Mrs. Maxie Smith Dunn, an aunt, and 50 thousand dollars to John S. Graham of Winston-Salem, N. C., where Reynolds was fatally shot in the palatial Reynolds home.

Residuary Legatees. The brother and sisters were named as residuary legatees, and the will shows Reynolds' intention that they should receive not only what might be left over from his personal estate after payment of the specific bequests, but also 15 million dollars in trust funds established for him by his parents and the principal of which he would not have received for another seven years.

There was considerable difference of opinion among lawyers questioned today as to Reynolds' logical right to dispose of these trust funds. Reynolds himself may have foreseen some possible questioning of this point, because he included in the will instruction that any attempt to alter the document or question its validity by a beneficiary should be answered by nullifying all grants to that beneficiary.

Not Yet Divorced. When Reynolds made his will he had been living on Long Island near the summer cottage of Libby Holman, the Broadway torch singer who was to become his second wife and later his widow charged with participation in his murder. He was married to his first wife, however, although they were separated and were not finally divorced until the autumn.

In listing the 50 thousand dollar bequests to his first wife and their daughter he noted in the will that he had provided for them already and that agreements had been executed whereby they relinquished any further right to share in his estate or the estates of his father or mother. He added that these agreements had been approved by an order of the superior court of Forsyth county, North Carolina, on August 4, 1931.

"Nevertheless," the will continues, "it is my desire to remember my said wife and my said daughter in this my last will and testament."

'Gas' Like Gold in Chile at $1 for a Gallon
Buses, Taxis and Private Motor Vehicles Drop Out of Service.

Santiago, Chile.—Gasoline is almost as scarce as gold in Chile since importing companies have restricted their distribution to less than one-half of normal requirements, and distraught motorists are in a sad plight, paying 35 pesos (nominally $4) for four gallons of gasoline. Lubricating oil, although on sale with no restrictions, has risen to a retail price approximating $2.50 in United States currency per gallon.

Along with this stringent handling of fuels exists a scarcity of tires, parts and other accessories. Bus owners are finding that a set of new tires costs as much as the value of their vehicles. As fares have not been raised, and all motor necessities are so highly priced, more and more buses, taxis and private cars are dropping out of use.

Demonstrations on the part of vehicle owners—midnight escapades on the part of hundreds of bus and taxi owners, blasting peals of dissatisfaction from noisy vehicle horns and arousing the president of the republic to hear their protests—were of no avail. After one of the midnight serenades of the bus lines, the American-owned West Indian Oil Company and the British-owned Shell-Mex Company adopted the temporary expedient of selling only 120 gallons per day per pump. As a result, lines of cars, stretching for blocks, assembled in the vicinities of pumps the previous night and awaited the opening of the pumps to fight for their share of fuel.

All manner of formal protest failing, vehicle owners organized traffic blockades in all important arteries of the city, parking their buses and taxis in busy sections and tying up traffic generally. This demonstration led to a conference called by the authorities and a daily quota was ultimately announced.

Under the rationing system, certain pumps are reserved for bus lines, others for taxis, others for trucks and still more for members of the Automobile Club, doctors and military purposes. Private motorists are limited to five gallons of gasoline a week. Buses get the lion's share, with taxis a close second.
