THE LIGHT SHIP

It was on the ocean's water blue

I saw the waves rush to land The sound of the fog horn went straight through. Angry waves and heaps of sand.

The Mariner lost his onward course And sounding he did take.

As the fog horn screached itself hoarse. And the sounding-line did the bottom rake.

The Light-Ship was the Mariner's goal. For hours he stood on deck, And threw out his line for a rift or shoal That might by chance cause a wreck.

The storm with its fury lashes The boat, like a toy on the wave. Then the Light-Ship suddenly flashes Its beason, as a beam from an unknown grave.

The Mariner rolled up his sounding line And in the cabin he went, And posted a bulletin which read in fine, You may rest safely now, For none of the bottom was sent.

We are in the trough, of a very rough sea. The waves are rolling high, There is a guiding Mariner to whom we can fiee,

That pilots us serenely by, The rocks and hoals that seem to hide, The Light-Ship that nestles near our side.
