ENGLAND LIMITS EDUCATION

To Americans, who take for granted that every child is entitled to a free high school education if he wishes it, the situation in England disclosed by the controversy over "circular 1421" must seem little short of shocking. Circular 1421 was issued recently by the national board of education, the president of which is a member of the British cabinet, to accompany the new draft regulations for secondary (high) schools. At first it attracted little attention and then its importance was discovered suddenly by magazines and newspapers opposed to the present National government.

Free public high school education on the scale that has long existed in the United States, of course, has never been known in England. The sons of well-to-do English families traditionally have been sent to private schools, like Eton and Harrow, and their daughters to similar institutions for girls. The public high schools generally have charged tuition fees, but a relatively small number of the children of parents not so well off have been provided with "free places" in recent years. A few cities had even abolished fees and the tendency has been to make increasingly liberal provision for free schooling. But now comes circular 1421.

In effect it is proposed, according to the Manchester Guardian, to sweep free secondary education out of existence, as it is known in the few cities that have abolished fees; to raise the fees generally throughout the country, and to impose a "means test" on all children still to be admitted to the free places that are left. In other words, after the new regulations go into effect, parents who wish to send their children to public high schools in England

"GLARING PRACTICES OF CONCEALMENT"

A New York judge, granting a receivership for a big eastern real estate and bond concern whose papers was spread all over the country, indicates that there were glaring practices of concealment from those whose money was drawn in.

The company advertised itself as a first mortgage real estate bond house, a claim that has a familiar ring and is meant to inspire confidence. Then it issued "general mortgage bonds" based on other than first mortgages on real estate. The public bought, not understanding the "general mortgage" idea as practiced by this house.

Further, it is charged, the house in the whoop-la days of 1928 and 1929 sold hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth, perhaps millions of dollars' worth, of real estate bonds based on mortgages on which interest had not been paid and on property for which the taxes were in default.

"It is tragical," says the court, "to compare the practices as engaged in by the defendants with the glowing representations of good faith set forth in the particular circular issued by the defendant which says: 'We regard our interests as identical with the interests of our clients. We represent the investor, not the borrower.'"

Again, how familiar this sounds. We heard similar statements from the lips of Samuel Insull and Martin J. Insull. Put in your money and it is safer than if you kept it yourself. That was the argument.

Now that it is caught, what is the answer of this bond and real estate house? That it was under no obligation to make disclosures unless prospective buyers asked specific questions.

That is not the British idea of responsibility. Lord Kylsant, peer and shipping magnate, has just come out of prison after having served a term for failing to tell English investors the true condition of companies for which he sought financial support. He did not falsify in so many words—he just did not tell.

That ought to be the standard in this country, and it will be. The practice of concealment has been widespread and is largely responsible for the great loss that investors now suffer. It is exactly this thing that Governor Roosevelt referred to in his Columbus speech. He would use full publicity and government supervision to prevent "the fooling of sensible people through misstatements and through the withholding of information on the part of private organizations, great and small, which seek to sell investments to the people."—Milwaukee Journal.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

In the District Court of Cass county, Nebraska.

In the matter of the Application of N. D. Talcott, Administrator of the Estate of William D. Coleman, deceased, for License to Sell Real Estate to Pay Debts.

Now on this 14th day of October, 1932, came N. D. Talcott, Administrator of the estate of William D. Coleman, deceased, and presents his petition for license to sell the real estate of the deceased party in order to pay the claims filed and allowed against said estate, and the expenses of administering said estate. It appearing from said petition that there is an insufficient amount of personal property in the hands of the Administrator to pay the claims presented and allowed by the County Court and the expenses of the administration of said estate; and that it is necessary to sell the whole of the real estate of the deceased in order to pay the aforesaid claims and the costs of administration.

It is therefore Considered, Ordered and Adjudged that all persons interested in the estate of William D. Coleman, deceased, appear before me, James T. Begley, Judge of the District Court, at the District Court room in the court house in the City of Plattsmouth, Cass county, Nebraska, on the 29th day of November, 1932, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon, and show cause, if any there be, why such license should not be granted to N. D. Talcott, Administrator of the estate of William D. Coleman, deceased, to sell all of the real estate of said deceased, so as to pay claims presented and allowed with the costs of administration and of this proceedings.

It is further Considered, Ordered and Adjudged, that notice be given to all persons interested by publication of this Order to Show Cause for four successive weeks in the Plattsmouth Journal, a legal newspaper published and of general circulation in the County of Cass, Nebraska. By the Court. JAMES T. BEGLEY, District Judge. o17-4w

THE CAR SWERVES—skids!—a cry—"Mother!" But Mother can't help now... Don't let your loved ones face this. Put on Safety Silvertowns—the tire that resists skidding—the Safest Tire Ever Built!

EVEN a slight skid is terrifying. More than that, thousands were killed or injured in skidding accidents last year.

Greater driving speeds—quick-action brakes—smooth, oil-filmed roads—all have increased the skidding hazard. All have increased the responsibility of tires.

Goodrich engineers spent three years developing a tire to meet these conditions. The new SAFETY Silvertown—the safest tire ever built.

If you think "tires are all alike"—just give us 10 minutes. We'll show you proof that the Safety Silvertown resists skidding more than any other tire—proof that its 15% thicker tread gives thousands of additional anti-skid miles—proof that its Full-Floating Cord construction brings greater protection against blow-outs!

Its extra safety doesn't cost you an extra cent—the price is the same as that of any standard tire. A generous trade-in allowance for your old tires, too! Don't wait—give your family the protection of Safety Silvertowns NOW!
