Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, February 11 By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Timely Warning"

Matt. 7:12-27.
The third and closing chapter of the Sermon on the Mount opens with exhortations to charitable judgment. Much harm is done by a too hasty judgment of others; men do not stop to ascertain the motive for the actions of others. It is far easier to see the faults and defects in others than our own. If we could see ourselves as others see us, we would hesitate to call names and try to correct their lives. Timely warning is given how to deal with holy things; things pertaining to Christ's religion.

Some have no use for pearls; they will only destroy them. The natural man will not understand, but will revile and profane what you offer them and assail you with ridicule and blasphemy. While they are in this frame of mind, nothing can be done with them.

Prayer-life must be a wrestling with God, like Jacob, who said: "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me." (Gen. 32:26.) God is wiser than man, hence will only give good gifts to those that ask of him.

"Therefore" looks back to Christ's teaching about the law. The sense is: Because ye are my disciples and bound to understand the O. T. in its higher and more spiritual sense, therefore do unto others all that you would ask they should do unto you, for this is the true meaning of the law and the prophets. The goodness of God is shown, in that he points out to men that sometime in life we all come to the place where we must choose our destiny—two ways are opened before us! If lies in man's power to choose, and that choice is either for life—or destruction. The earnest seeker will have assistance from God, if he asks; the careless man will take the easiest way that is offered. The devil will paint the broad way, with its alluring pleasures and make it so attractive that many are there that enter in thereby; while God stands at the narrow gate and beckons man to follow the light that leads upwards—not the easy way, but the safe way—where people find no regrets when they reach the "end of the road." (The teacher with some imagination will picture the two ways, the crowding of the broad way with its accidents and wrecks—the narrow way, no crowding, no accidents, the safe way.)

Jesus calls attention to false teachers. It is false teaching by the brewers and distillers that their products produce health and bring prosperity and happiness—the broad way is strewn with the wrecks of drunken men, wasted lives and fortunes, wrecked homes, impoverished nations. Surely by the fruit the business is known. The liquor business has not one good feature in it; it cannot be regulated—it thrives only by lawlessness; that is its element.
These false teachers wear the outward appearance of philanthropists—they will balance our national budget, they will make the nation healthier (health drinks)—but it cannot be sold to soldier or sailors nor to the Indians. Why not? It's intoxicating! The business is corrupt and produces corruption. The tree is corrupt, so is its fruit. That most Christian movement, the prohibition reform, is eager and willing to be judged by its fruits—by what it has done to uplift and elevate humanity.

Now comes our Lord and makes it plain that "religion is not a dogma nor an emotion—but a service." (Rev. D. Hitchcock.)

In the great judgment day, many will say: "Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy (teach) in thy name? And cast out devils and done mighty works in thy name?" It is a fact that God sometimes, for the sake of the flock, condescends to bless the work of evil shepherds, whose lives are not openly scandalous and in general we may say that "The unworthiness of the minister hinders not the effect of the sacrament." But, there, comes the reply: "I never knew you—as true disciples." The divinity of Christ appears not only from His office of Judge, but from His power to read the heart. He claims that the most secret thought of the millions of the human race are naked and open before Him, and this is in effect a claim to be divine.

The summing up of the whole sermon is contained in the parable of two builders; this little story gathered up all the teachings of the sermon. "Therefore, since no man will enter the kingdom by making a profession or confession, nor living an honest and upright life, or even doing some good deeds, but hears my words and does them, they are like two builders, one lays his foundation deep upon a rock; the other shallow upon sand. The test came when a storm broke upon them and floods descended. This portrays man in general. The soul that has not had a Godly sorrow for sin, that did not cry out like the Psalmist: Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O Lord: Lord, hear my voice; let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my supplications." (Ps. 130:1), has never had the experience of David that God "set his foot upon a rock" (Ps. 40:2) and "rejoice that his transgression is forgiven, and his sins blotted out." (Ps. 51:1) but is content with his "confession of faith"—that does not bring the joy of full salvation into his soul. He is like the man whose house rests on sand.

When the test comes, the storms break around him and he has no "anchor for his soul." (Hebr. 6:19). The test comes to both, the small and the great, the humblest disciple as well as to the apostle.

The warning of the Lord should be heeded—it will decide our eternal destiny—how we build!

(P. S.—The writer of these lessons appreciates very much the kind letters which have been received from the many friends, telling of the enjoyment they have had in reading them. The Journal has arranged for their continuation in its columns and we shall strive to make them more interesting during the coming year, if possible.—L. Neitzel.)

Nebraska River Jobs are Facing New Dangers

Court Action Threatens to Block the Sutherland and Columbus Plans—Funds May be Lost.

Nebraska's big river projects, for which nearly $15,000,000 in federal public works money was allotted, Sunday night faced new dangers that threatened expenditure of any of these vast sums within the state.

The threat of court action to block the projects, the biggest fear of the sponsors of the $7,500,000 Sutherland power-irrigation project and of the $7,300,000 Columbus power project, became a reality Saturday, almost on the heels of warnings of Interior Secretary Ickes that indefinite delay in starting the money to work would not be countenanced and a threat to transfer the money to other states if delay continued too long.

Validity of the entire law under which the districts sponsoring the projects were organized and would operate, was challenged in a petition filed in the district court here by attorneys for a group of Platte county land owners. They asked an injunction to prevent issuance by state officials of water rights for the Columbus project but failed immediately to win an order restraining Governor Bryan and State Engineer Roy Cochran from granting the water appropriations.

District Judge Broady, presenting with the petition at his home late Saturday afternoon, decided to act but said he would study the matter until Monday. If he should grant a restraining order, it would tie up the water rights for the Columbus project indefinitely, pending a hearing of the Platte county citizens' case on its merits.

Should Broady refuse the restraining order, the two big districts still would face the threat of the action to the validity of the law, the possibility that Governor Bryan might refuse to act until the case was settled or that federal officials would decide the dangers of delay were too great and would order cancellation of the grants. All were considered possibilities by persons interested in the progress of the projects.

The Sutherland project still was reported under study by PWA officials at Washington who sought to determine whether the water agreement with the proposed Tri-County project would interfere with the Sutherland's plans. Governor Bryan was studying a proposed federal power commission license for the Columbus project pending action on its request for a water appropriation.

WELCOME SETTLED DOLLAR
Washington—The administration's dollar devaluation action was described by the directorate of the National Association of Manufacturers as one stimulating confidence in government credit and making possible business commitments for the future. The expression was contained in a statement issued after a poll of sentiment in the directorate. While the general sentiment was favorable, there were reservations attached to several comments by members of the organization.

"Clarification of the administration's monetary policy," the president of the association, Clinton L. Bard of Camden, N. J., said, "has improved business sentiment, stimulated confidence in the credit position of the government and made possible industrial commitments for the future with a reasonable degree of safety."

F. N. Bard, president of a Chicago manufacturing concern, saying President Roosevelt's actions in the monetary field as well as general business "gives business a starting point" added that "if apprehension with reference to the enormous expenditures of the government and its unbalanced budget can be reduced, the situation will be in excellent shape."

LIQUIDATING M'LEAN BANK
Norfolk, Neb.—Depositors of the McLean State Bank of McLean, which stockholders last week voted to liquidate, are being paid in full, the money having been deposited in the De Loy National bank of Norfolk for that purpose. The sum is about $50,000.

Officers and directors of the bank will collect the notes and liquidate the assets. J. Norwood is president and other directors are: William Neumeier, Joe Frank, F. C. Weaver and Jake Weyhrich. Mr. Norwood, while in Norfolk Monday, announced he would remain in McLean for the present to assist in the liquidation of the assets.

BETTER RETURNS ON BEETS

Washington.—Rep. Carpenter said he understood the administration would offer "in the very near future" legislation to improve returns to sugar beet producers. A move to make sugar beets a basic commodity along with cattle in the day's house action was denied Carpenter by the rules committee, he said, on the ground it was "germane."

"The amendment I intended to offer would call for immediate appropriation of 25 million dollars which the department of agriculture would use to pay a bonus of $1.50 a ton on all sugar beets and cane grown and delivered to producers during 1933.

Carpenter said beet growers "have been the victims of unfair, dishonest and unreasonable contracts which enabled sugar manufacturers to pay a multitude of cash and stock dividends to the department and impoverishment of beet growers themselves." Beet growers would receive not less than $6.50 a ton under Carpenter's amendment.

ASK TREATY BE RATIFIED

Washington.—A letter from the American Farm Bureau federation urging the immediate ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty was made public by Senator Nye, North Dakota, with a statement that it called for support of the pact from all senators representing farm areas. The federation meets head-on the issue of diversion from Lake Michigan, Nye said. "Having committed itself to the entire federal program of inland waterways, it has studiously examined the engineering facts and now announces that, following a meeting of its executive board in Washington Jan. 10, not only is the quantity of diverted water adequate for the Illinois waterway, but that it believes the treaty should be ratified at once and without reservation, lest the opportunity be forever lost."

The farm bureau in its letter said it "expected senators of both parties to redeem the St. Lawrence seaway pledges of their respective platforms."

CWA COMMITTEE RESIGNS

Greeley, Colo.—The Weld county relief and CWA committees notified Benjamin Glassberg, Colorado chief director, they had resigned following Glassberg's removal Saturday of Charles Hansen, Greeley publisher, as county CWA and relief administrator.

Hansen gave out the telegram sent him by Glassberg. It said the Weld county committee had been found to have "followed the practice of refusing federal aid unless applicants first had recommendations of the Great Western Sugar Co." Also, the telegram said the committee "permitted other irregularities such as discriminating against Spanish-Americans in the selection of men for CWA relief."

MARE RESCUED FROM CAVE

Ashland, Neb.—Her enforced nineteen day fast ended, Bertha was rounding out her once attractive curves with a healthy diet of corn and oats Tuesday. Bertha, an old horse belonging to the Axel Nelson farm family near here, was missed from her pasture nearly three weeks ago and search failed to reveal her whereabouts.

On the neighboring Stenberg farm several days ago, Lawrence Stenberg, 12, was sent to the potato cave by his mother. There he found Bertha, who had backed into the cave and had become so tightly wedged that she could not move. The Nelsons were notified and Bertha, weak from hunger and thirst was rescued. The 18 year old sorrel mare, who was able to return to the Nelson farm under her own power, is gradually regaining her strength.

AN EXPEDITER TO NEBRASKA

Washington.—An "expediter" of the public works administration may travel west soon to look over, among others, the Sutherland and Tri-County power and irrigation projects in Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Minnesota projects, is considering the trip, although it has not been scheduled definitely. Checking up on the approved Sutherland and the proposed Tri-County projects, now the subject of water supply examinations here, would not be the sole purpose of the trip, but Twitchell would confer with local authorities about them. No decision had been reached Monday, in the PWA's study of the Sutherland's status under a water-distribution arrangement with Tri-County.

All Federal Dry Cases are Wiped Out

U. S. Supreme Court Rules Against Trial for Prerepeal Violators—400 Free Here.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The supreme court ruled Monday persons charged with violating the national prohibition law before its repeal cannot be tried for such offenses in the federal courts.

The case was brought by the United States as a test case to determine its policy regarding the thousands of prohibition cases now pending in federal courts.

The government appealed from a decision by Federal Judge Haynes of the middle district of North Carolina directing the discharge of Byrum Gibson and Claude Chambers on the ground that prohibition repeal prevented further prosecution.

The court took the position it had no power, in view of prohibition repeal, to hear and determine cases involving alleged violations of the Volstead act.

Clears Nebraska Docket Of 508 Liquor Cases.

Supreme court action in ruling pending federal liquor cases cannot be tried will result in almost a clean sweep of the criminal docket in Nebraska district and allow the court to clear all other cases without delay. United States District Judge James A. Donohoe declared Monday.

"The docket is cleared of 508 cases in my division," Judge Donohoe said. "Of 563 criminal cases, 484 will be disposed of in the Omaha division, 22 at Norfolk and two at Chadron. This will clear the slate at Norfolk, and reduce it in Omaha to 15 cases."

The supreme court act frees those named in indictments which listed Bill Maher as chief of the north side, and Fran Kalmaza as leader in south side liquor rings as distinguished from two city-wide indictments involving defendants tried in the 1932 conspiracy trial. Indictments in the city-wide case previously had been dropped by the Omaha office, upon orders from the attorney general.

Judge Donohoe said it would have taken two years to try the cases had "we given each one but a day."

Charles E. Sandell, United States attorney for Nebraska, said: "It is to be regretted many flagrant violations could not be punished. I think in Nebraska an honest effort was made to enforce the law and we were making headway since prohibition was transferred from the Treasury to the Department of Justice."

Why sing about the "Big Bad Wolf"? It has just turned out to be one of those chow lap dogs?
