Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, February 25 By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"The Twelve Sent Forth"

Matt. 9:35; 10:8; 10:32-33.

"Evangelism and Missions" should be the title of this lesson. The work of Jesus had progressed so far that he could send out six pairs of preachers. He had been up and down thru Galilee teaching, preaching and healing and had seen the masses hungry for the word of God; explaining the rules and the way to enter the Kingdom. His great heart was moved with compassion, a combination of sorrow, sympathy and love. The picture which Jesus beheld as he walked through his own country is repeated today on every side of us, and he is still moved with compassion because of those who are helpless and undone. The Jewish religion had degenerated into mere formalism, as it is with many churches and members today; they do not get any thrill or joy out of the services; they are no better after the so-called "service" than they were before. They have gone through the formality—the preacher has put in 30 minutes of "talk"—the people have sung their hymns—paid their contribution—and—go home, making themselves believe that they have worshipped. They have not received any new inspiration, no new impulse for a deeper work of grace, nor have they been lifted to a higher plane.

Jesus "saw" this and was moved with compassion. He is so moved today, for the people get "stones" for "bread." No wonder that the masses do not go to church, and the churches are losing ground. "Give them to eat," says our Lord. The world is hungry for the word and sympathy and love. Jesus saw the multitudes rushing on to eternity, and no one crying: "Where will you spend eternity?"

The churches move complacently on, going through the routine of their schedule and make themselves believe that they have done their duty. Not so Jesus. Seeing the distress of the masses, he said to the disciples: "Tray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he send forth laborers into his harvest." And follows this exhortation with a practical example: Selecting twelve men out of his followers, he empowers them with authority to do what they had seen him do. We believe that every preacher must have a direct "call" from God, for the high office of ambassador, for he represents God. See II Cor. 5:20.

We do not believe in "made preachers." An interesting study is the call of the twelve; why Jesus chose these men; why all Galileans and only one from Judea; why these unlearned men instead of scholars and men of influence. Learn the names of the twelve; why twelve and not thirteen or twenty? The instruction Jesus gave them before they entered their work: (a) "Do not go in any way to the Gentiles," nor "any city of the Samaritans," but he himself had entered the town of Sychar and the borders of Tyre and Sidon. The time was not ripe and they were not experienced enough. After the resurrection they were "to go into all the world." (Matt. 28:19) And in Acts 1:8, they were especially instructed to go to Samaria. Galilee would be all the ground they could cover; there would be plenty to do. (b) The message was, "The Kingdom of heaven is at hand." That means the reign of universal righteousness, love and peace, which he came to earth to establish. By saying that it was at hand he meant that he the founder of it, the long prophesied Messiah, the Son of God, was in the flesh, dwelling among men. The climax of all the ages had arrived. The house of Israel must be served first, for "Salvation is of the Jews" and—for the Jews. The credentials of the disciples were the power to "heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse the lepers, cast out demons." In modern times, these things are done by the hospitals for they are the outgrowth of the church and through them the church is still carrying on her work of alleviating the suffering of man, and even doing the almost impossible in bringing back life that had been despaired of. It is a holy ministry that Doctors, Nurses and Deaconesses perform. The disciples were not to take payment for healing. This is not at variance with the principle that "the laborer is worthy of his food." (v. 10).

Now follows what Jesus has to say about "confessing" Him—not "professing" about ourselves. Confessing Christ means open loyalty to him; showing faithful allegiance to him. It cost much in those days to confess Christ. Even now it is not always easy. We think of the testimony meetings of former days, when God's children, with shining faces, and a holy enthusiasm, would speak of the joy and happiness that their Lord and savior had brought into their life and they would pledge their loyalty to him; the Germans would say: "Ich will ihm treu sein bis in den Tod." I will serve him and be true to him. But, alas, that is another of the "old paths," the "good ways" abandoned. (The last old fashioned testimony meeting which the writer conducted was held at Union, Cass county, in December, 1933. It was a glorious day.)

No great reward is promised for confessing Christ, but he says: "I will confess him before my Father, who is in heaven." What an eternal joy if one can hear Christ say on the great day of judgment: "This soul is mine, mine forever! Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." "In thy presence is fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore." (David.) "For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand." (Ps. 84:10). A great reward! One well worthy of our taking the trouble to "confess Christ."

RECOVER PET DOG

Saturday afternoon Sheriff Sylvester and Deputy Sheriff Lancaster were engaged in search for the parties that had paroled a pet dog belonging to Charles Barrows of the Highway lunch room south of this city. The dog had been taken from the lunchroom by some persons earlier in the day and its absence was not discovered until sometime later. The officers securing a clue to the person taking the dog proceeded to Omaha where the party resided, only to discover that the lady in question had gone to Nebraska City to visit relatives. The officers later recovered the dog at Nebraska City and restored it to the owner. The case was compromised by the person taking the dog paying the mileage of the officers and the cost of the investigation and Mr. Barrows declined to prosecute under the circumstances.
