Congress has reduced the price of becoming a citizen, but have you noticed what it has been doing to the price of remaining ones.

Nothing is so soothing to the tyro fisherman as to come back and find that it was a bad day for fishing and the experts didn't get any either.

The Detroit News guesses Katharine Hepburn's husband was just naturally obscure, as he doesn't seem any more noticeable since the divorce.

The origin of the Chicago stockyards fire seems to be somewhat in doubt, but the fact that it started in the sheep pens would tend to exonerate Mrs. O'Leary's cow this time.

The Washington political experts have had great fun telling us all that the Pennsylvania primaries "meant." But unless Jim Reed gets into the Missouri senatorial race, how are the Washington experts going to have any fun in Missouri?

Concerning the quip about a fan dancer being a nudist with a cooling system, we suggest the "fans" really need the cooling system.

Well, Postmaster General Farley announced Saturday there would be no Santa Claus stamps, so that seems to let the Record's suggestion out.

With Jim Reed to make it louder and Eddie Dowling to make it funnier, Senator Soaper sees no reason why the senate should delay waivers on Huey.

A California woman divorced her husband because he would eat nothing but pickles, salami and bread and milk. And quite right. Pickles and salami don't call for bread and milk.

Someone inquires whether it is proper this season to eat the cherry in the cocktail. It depends upon how many cocktails remain to be consumed. One doesn't wish to be crammed full of cherries, you know.

"The Last Judgment"

Matt. 25:31-46.
The happiest and saddest scenes are here depicted by our Lord. The happiest, because the true and faithful are receiving their eternal reward; the saddest, because those that neglect all opportunities of serving God will receive what justly belongs to them—for sins of omission, banishment from the presence of the Lord—and that is hell.

Man chooses his own destiny. Two ways lie open to him—the straight gate and the wide gate (Matt. 7:13). Jesus says: "Come unto me" and eternal life is yours; the devil says: "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." But most men go heedlessly along, following their own inclination. The two ways lead to two different destinations. The last day of the old world has come. The Son of Man makes his appearance—in glory.

Once he came in poverty, "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant" (Phil. 2:7).
But at this second advent he will come in his glory—as a king on his throne—as the judge of all men. What a contrast!

"It is this second coming of Christ that gives rationality and meaning to the groaning and travail of the world. Unless some such consummation awaits us at the finish, all the agony and striving of the centuries have been in vain, all the blood of the martyrs has been shed in vain; all our struggles and labors have been for naught, and history is bereft of meaning. It is the sure promise of the coming of the Lord that lends meaning to history; that justifies all our labor and conflict and travail." (Rev. J. D. Jones.)

The nations of the earth will appear before him. By implication, we believe that the gospel has made its way around the world at the last judgment. Now follows an indescribable scene—the great separation. Man and wife, parents and children, may meet for the last time. The wife, a devoted servant of Jesus Christ, the man a careless, shiftless, patroller, not caring for either God or man—will be separated. So the children from the parents. The angels of God will gather the wheat from the tares. We can only think with a shudder of the moment of separation. We think of a man as a step-brother to the church who lets his wife and children go to church and care for the religion in the home, but he does nothing to help them. To the right and left of the throne means the place of honor and the place of rejection. How glad and happy must be the righteous, that they will be judged by their beloved Master, savior and friend, and hear the joyful invitation, "Come, ye blessed of my father." They heeded the call, "Come unto me, etc." and now they are invited to receive their inheritance.

"I was hungry, and ye gave me to eat." Doubtless often our Lord was actually hungry on his travels up and down the stony paths of Palestine. He lived on the grateful gifts of those to whom he had ministered. He begged a drink of water of the Samaritan woman; "the cup of cold water" was doubtless in memory of many a thirsty hour. "I was a stranger" refers to his pathetic saying, "the foxes have holes, etc."

The central doctrine of Christianity is that Christians are finally judged and rewarded by their fruits. We enter the kingdom not by saying, "Lord, Lord," but by doing his will. "What does the Lord require of thee, but to do justice, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Micah 6:8).

Unconsciously, those to the right had done the Master's will, as the natural outflowing love of their hearts. They believe there must be some mistake, and they will not take advantage of a mistake, even to gain entrance into the kingdom of heaven. They will not enter under the cloak of some other person's good deed. They are too honest for that. Of all the good and kindly deeds done in Jesus' name, there is "a book of remembrance written before him." (Mal. 3:16). "The supreme sacrament of all, greater than all the sacraments about which the church has disputed for centuries, is the sacrament of service." (Rev. Sidney M. Berry.)

The arraignment of those on the left. Here follows perhaps the most terrible of all words spoken by Christ—words so terrible that Christian preachers and teachers seldom dwell upon them. Yet, who can say that they are not true and that they are not of the utmost importance to all mortals? "Depart from me, ye cursed!" What were the sins for which they were punished? All sins of omission. "Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me." Many find it difficult to believe in the eternal punishment of the wicked, to reconcile it with the goodness of God. God is not only benevolent; he is also righteous and holy and true; and if his truth and holiness require the everlasting punishment of sin, his benevolence will not prevent it. There will be no appeal from the sentence—it is final. In justice to the righteous, God could not admit determined sinners to his heaven. There is a hell clearly told of in the divine book.

There are 256 chapters in the N. T.; in 234 times, nearly one verse for every chapter in the N. T. alone, God says that there is a place of eternal punishment. May we well consider the fate of the unrepenting, persistent sinners and their doom.

"And, oh, what a weeping and wailing as the lost were told their fate. They cried for the rocks and the mountains. They prayed, but their prayer was too late." (Rev. 6:16).

Liquor Control States to Pay Federal Taxes

United States Supreme Court Refuses Protest from Ohio—"Private Trade."

Washington, May 21.—Ohio and other states which monopolize the sale of intoxicating liquor within their boundaries must pay federal taxes.

A unanimous decision of the supreme court, handed down today by Justice Sutherland, declared the principle had been firmly established that "the instrumentalities, means and operations whereby the states exert the governmental powers belonging to them are exempt from taxation by the United States," but that "the immunity of the states from federal taxation is limited to those agencies which are of a governmental character."

"Nongovernment Function."
"Whenever a state engages in a business of a private nature it exercises nongovernmental functions," the opinion said, "and the business, though conducted by the state, is not immune from the exercise of the power of taxation which the constitution vests in the congress."
Ohio, to prevent the return of the saloon, in December, 1933, set up a state monopoly for the distribution and sale of all spirituous liquors and purchased a supply costing approximately $4,500,000 for sale through stores owned, managed and controlled by the state.

Not a Police Power.
Asserting that the United States proposed to tax this business, Ohio asked the supreme court for permission to bring suit against the commissioner of internal revenue, insisting that congress in imposing taxes on the liquor business did not intend to tax a state, and that such taxes would be illegal. It insisted it had the right to carry on the liquor business under its police power without being subject to federal taxes.
The court replied today that the repeal of prohibition did not make the liquor business, which had always been a private activity, a governmental function. It added that the police power of a state as applied to business activities is the power to regulate those activities, and not to carry them on.
The court refused to permit Ohio to file the suit.

Ruling May Increase Iowa Whisky Prices.

Des Moines, Ia., May 21.—Like Ohio, Iowa has asked that no federal tax be collected on liquor sold by Iowa, but Attorney General O'Connor and heads of the Iowa liquor commission tonight declined to comment on how the supreme court ruling might affect Iowa.
Ohio's liquor bill is different than Iowa's. O'Connor said, in that it has other licensing privileges besides selling liquor through stores. William Millhaem, assistant chairman of the commission, said an opinion will be sought.
It was admitted that the federal tax of $2 a gallon on whisky would materially add to the price of liquor sold at the Iowa stores.

LINKED IN TWO ROBBERIES

Canon City, Colo.—William Dahl-hunt, alias Slippery-Dell Hanlon, life-term Colorado convict, has been linked with two Wisconsin payroll robberies during his brief liberty on parole in 1933, Roy Best, state prison warden, said Sunday. Best said he had been asked to place a "hold order" against Hanlon and Lawrence Johnson, alias George Anderson, also a convict at the state penitentiary here. Hanlon's photograph has been identified as that of a man who participated in the $46,000 robbery of the Superior Light and Power company's payroll truck in Superior, Wis., in November, 1933, and he is also suspected of the $1,200 robbery of the Baraboo, Wis., Light and Power company, the same month. Best said he was advised by the police chief of Superior, Wis., Johnson's photograph has been partly identified as of a man who participated in the same robberies, Best said.
Hanlon, Colorado's most notorious convict, was sentenced to life ten years ago as a highway robber.

DEAD FROM POISON

Norfolk, Neb.—Frank Green, about 33, who was released a month ago from the Norfolk state hospital, drank poison Saturday night and died a few minutes later. He was on a lawn in the west part of Norfolk when he took the poison. After leaving the hospital, he went to live with a sister at Fullerton. Authorities said they had not determined what prompted Green to take the poison.
