Water Not Too Plentiful

On account of the very dry weather which has been prevailing the well that supplies the city of Union has been rather tardy in supplying the amount of water required for the use of the town. The officers have therefore issued a manifesto stating that water consumers be restrained from using water for sprinkling lawns or in the gardens and for the watering of stock, but shall use it only for household consumption. It is hoped that by doing this the supply may hold out and be sufficient to maintain at all times a sufficient reserve for use in fighting fires. Otherwise, it will be necessary to pump water direct from the Weeping Water, and this would undoubtedly not be fit for home use and drinking purposes. It takes an awful lot of water, applied constantly to do a lawn much good this dry weather and if done at the danger of hampering the supply for household use, would cause a great inconvenience to all water consumers of the town, to say nothing of increasing the fire hazard due to an inadequate supply. Many towns over the state, faced with a similar drying up of their supply wells, are putting similar restrictions into effect. In Lincoln, prior to the securing of city water from the gravel stratas along the Platte river near Ashland, a restricted use of water was required for several years during the dry season. Let everyone work together for the common good and in order that there may be sufficient water for drinking purposes and household use.
