We cannot criticize others for. Ironically, Raymond Hamilton, who was delivered from the Eastham prison farm last January in a raid supposedly engineered by Barrow, went back there to chop wood only a few hours before he is old time lender was buried. He is under a sentence of 362 years for a variety of crimes.

BOY SHOT IN NECK

Omaha.—Joe Heftl, 6, of Omaha, was wounded slightly late Friday when struck in the neck by a stray bullet. Police arrested John Riss, 18, Omaha, and booked him for investigation in connection with the shooting.

Drouth Survey of Every Farm Starts at Once

Federal Funds to Be Used to Help Care for Subsistence Stock, Not Entire Herd.

A statewide survey of every Nebraska farm to determine drouth relief needs has begun and L. A. White, rural rehabilitation director, said he hoped to have the survey complete by the middle of next week so purchase of feed and seed for needy farmers could begin at once.

Federal Relief Administrator Haynes said he was prepared to spend up to $50,000 of his balance on hand immediately on the drouth program because of the assurance given him by Harry L. Hopkins, in charge of the federal relief program.

Haynes said he was assured of $92,000 for drouth relief and $184,000 for feed during June after a conference with Hopkins on the strength of information from W. H. Brokaw, state AAA administrator, that aid would be needed for farmers in from 40 to 45 counties because of the drouth damage.

The survey to determine needs is being undertaken under Brokaw's direction thru county agricultural agents. L. A. White said it was planned to use volunteer helpers in every school district to get the information quickly. Farmers will be asked to sign blanks telling what livestock and poultry they have on hand, how much feed, whether they can get thru on their own resources and if not, what feed will be needed and whether they will sell any of their stock.

Haynes, who returned Friday from meetings in Kansas City where he conferred with Hopkins, said it should be kept clear that this program was only a relief program. Any purchases of cattle, he said, will be made by the agricultural adjustment administration.

"This money," he said, "assigned to us is given solely to take care of those farmers who are on relief or would be forced onto relief if they are not given help in keeping their stock."

"We are not supposed," he added, "to keep the whole herd alive but only the farmer's subsistence stock, that is, his work stock and a few cows, pigs and chickens."

Haynes said he had requested $893,000 for Nebraska for June. The granting in full of his requests for 3,276,000 for the drouth relief program leaves action still to be taken on the requested $617,000 for other phases of the relief program in this state, the chief items of which are $50,000 asked for rural rehabilitation. Haynes said action on these June requests will not be taken until Hopkins returns to Washington next week.

Flowers are Torn from Clyde Barrow Grave

Southwest's Most Feared Outlaw Is Buried in Dallas—Bonnie Parker Funeral Sunday.

Dallas, Tex.—Clyde Champion Barrow—until three days ago the most feared killer in the southwest—was buried at sunset on a chalky West Dallas hillside near his boyhood home.

Souvenir hunters snatched roses, gladioli and peonies from the mound of earth as Barrow's mother was led walking from the grave. "Clyde, oh Clyde," she cried. "Nobody but a mother can know how hard it is to leave you."

Far across the city, in a funeral parlor, the shot torn body of Clyde's gun woman, Bonnie Parker, was ready for transfer to the home of her mother, Mrs. Emma Parker, awaiting private funeral services Sunday.

Bonnie had predicted their deaths in the ballad of "Bonnie and Clyde" she composed as they dashed from hideout to hideout in half a dozen states, fleeing from officers who sought them for a dozen killings and robberies whose number remains uncounted. Officers' guns blazed from ambush as the pair roared at 55 miles an hour over a highway near Areadin, La., Wednesday, and the long hunt was at an end.

For two days and nights, crowds had fought for a chance to file thru the chambers in the funeral home here for a last look at the West Dallas man, only 24, whose name in five years had come to send a streak of terror across the midwest.

Rev. Clifford Andrews, Pentecostal minister, intoned from Job as he sought to console weeping relatives and friends at the funeral home.

"I have not had the privilege of knowing this young Barrow," he told them, "but I love him. Raymond Hamilton (Clyde's partner in crime for several years) once said to me, when I visited him in jail: 'A lot of people don't know Clyde and Bonnie, but I have seen them kneel down and pray.'"

The mother of Bonnie Parker, wife of a Texas convict, Roy Thorton, who fled with Clyde from state to state and died with a machine gun across her lap, stood and looked at Barrow's face, but said nothing. The press of the crowd was such at the cemetery that an aunt and a young woman cousin of the dead outlaw fainted.

"Even in the worst of us there is good," Mr. Andrews prayed as the body was lowered into the grave, "and in the best of us is something

Drouth Increases Sorghum Planting in State

Farmers of State Write to College of Agriculture for Advice on Forage Crop Culture.

A great increase in sorghum acreage all over Nebraska is seen by P. H. Stewart, extension agronomist at the college of agriculture. Lack of rainfall in most sections is causing record interest in the "drouth resistant" crops.

Farmers from all over the country are writing and calling the agronomy department at the college of agriculture, as well as agricultural agents over the state, for information regarding cultural practices of both the grain and forage sorghums. Elton Lux, extension editor at the college, said this week on his return from south central counties that a great deal of interest was being manifested in the sorghums.

Many farmers are asking about methods of planting the sorghums. Since most farmers are planning on putting in some atlas sorgo, a forage sorghum originally developed in Kansas City, they are interested in the rate of planting. Blank plates for listers or planters bored out with about 12 holes, each three-eighths inches in diameter and beveled out from below are being recommended to eastern Nebraska farmers. For ensilage or fodder purposes, it should be planted at the rate of 12 to 18 pounds to the acre. For hay purposes, it is best to use 50 to 100 pounds to the acre.

Atlas can be planted anytime between now and June 10 safely, Stewart says. If no rain falls immediately there should be no hurry about getting the crop into the ground. Seed is available for 2 or 3 cents a pound from seed houses, but there is none in the hands of farmers.

Atlas sorgo is not the only sorghum crop to be planted this year, for hundreds of farmers are planning on putting in some grain sorghums. Tests outstate last year showed the best varieties will make as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Plates with three-sixteenths inch holes for the lister are ordinarily used for planting at the rate of 8 to 10 pounds per acre. For the south part of the state, west to McCook, pink kafir is being recommended. The western black-hull variety is recommended for that part of the state, north of the southern tier of counties as it is earlier than pink kafir. It is not likely, however, to mature in northern or western Nebraska.

Abducted the Wrong Man; Slain to Silence Him

Texas Dairyman Is the Victim of Kidnaping Intended for a Neighbor.

Mexia, Tex.—A theory that kidnapers killed John L. Adams, dairyman, when they learned they had abducted him instead of a wealthy neighbor, intended as their victim, was advanced by police as they investigated the slaying. A note received by the dairyman's son Tuesday, the day after the kidnaping, said: "Your old man is safe, excuse us, we got the wrong man."

Adams lived next door to Joe Morris, wealthy Groesbeck businessman, and police theorized Morris was the intended victim of the kidnaping. They expressed belief the abductors had killed Adams to silence him, after learning of their unprofitable mistake. The body of Adams was found in a tank about a mile south of Groesbeck his home. A bullet hole was in the temple, a handkerchief gag in the mouth, and a belt fastened tightly about the throat. The pockets of his clothing had been turned out, indicating a hurried search by the kidnapers for any valuables.
