Every now and then one sees a deceived blonde who has begun to reverse her decision.

The honeymoon is over when he suggests that a permanent wave should be permanent.

We suggest a remedy for the brain trusters when they become surly bad boys—send them to bed without their alphabet soup.

A boy who is tied to his mother's apron string when he is young will never have a rope around his neck when he grows up.

Some sour philosopher says the average woman spends more time on her complexion than her intellect. Well, who would look twice at a beautifully rouged intellect walking down the street?

Now that there is no more money for emergency relief work, we would be willing to trade back a few of the CWA stone walls for a little honest employment, and at a discount.

People are like crackers. If they are not already in the soup, they soon will be.

That Woolworth heiress whose foreign marriage isn't turning out so well must feel like five or ten cents.

Those who insist that congressmen are overpaid just don't know how it feels to be afraid to go home and afraid to stay in Washington all at once.

A native of Persia has been found who is 11 feet 3 inches tall. Are the Persian youngsters sufficiently educated in physical science to pester the tall man by asking him if it is cold up there?

In the case of the Canadian family with the newly arrived quintuplet girls, there seems to be nothing like getting the family started on an even footing, so none of the children will have any advantage or disadvantage. Furthermore, the practice of handing down outgrown clothing should be reduced to a minimum.

THERE'S NO COMEBACK FOR LIVERY STABLE

We have heard much in the last decade or two about the return of the horse. When there is much to be done that must be done quickly, the horse cannot compete with the motor. But on the other hand, a horse has a longer life than a motor and his feed bill is less. In times of stress, or where there is no great hurry, the farm horse may find a place.

The census of 1920 showed more than 20 million horses on the country's farms. In 1930 the number had sunk to 13 1/2 million. But in 1933 it had risen to 15 1/4 million.

The horse may return to the farm, to some extent, but he will not pull street cars again, nor can he make use of him. He is far too slow and he does not take the hills as the motor does. In the cities the horse's only place seems to be found in the practice of equestrianism. There will always be those who love the horse for himself, though they are comparatively few in number.

One institution that, with the passing of the horse, the country has missed, has been the old-time open forum known as the livery stable. In this pleasant retreat, with its generous leisure, its good companionship and its familiar odors, national policies were discussed, the gossip of the day considered and judgments passed. The garage, lacking the necessary leisure, has not taken its place.

It is unlikely that the horse will return sufficiently to bring back this splendid national institution—the livery stable—now vanished from the coasts of time.—Minneapolis Journal.

A LOWER MOTOR TAX PAYS

Tax gatherers in all branches may well take heed of the experience that various states have had with motor car taxes. Oregon has substituted a flat $5 registration fee for the sliding scale that ranged from $10 to $50 according to weight. Nevada has put in a $5 registration instead of 30 cents a hundredweight, the minimum being 1,700 pounds. Utah has reduced the charge, based on horsepower. And a survey of the country shows that in more than one-third of the states there has been a reduction.

This has not been done out of mercy to the motorists, or because the states found too much revenue. It has been done as a means of raising more, not less money.

Most, if not all of the states now have gasoline taxes and these are easier and more certain producers of revenue than any registration fee. California's low registration, $3, has encouraged the use of motor cars and has helped produce the millions that have kept the highway program going.

The gasoline tax is paid a few pennies at a time. The registration fee comes with one wallop that, where it is large, makes many an owner of an old car lay it up. This reduces the sale of gasoline, loses the sales tax upon it and reduces taxable resources of producers or distributors. The lesson for tax gatherers is that in any field there is a limit beyond which there is vast difference between laying a tax and getting the revenue.—From the San Francisco Chronicle.

MINING OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Here's an encouraging paragraph, taken from the Mining Review of Salt Lake City:

"Increasing activities in the metal mining industry, augmented by $35 gold, and a more favorable outlook for the other metals, is the glad news refrain now growing in volume and strength from all sections of the west. A recent survey among more than four thousand companies from Arizona to the Canadian border gives definite evidence of a return to activity. . . . Assayers are busy again, old mills are turning wheels that haven't moved in more than three years and many new ore treating plants are contemplated, smelter receipts show a substantial increase in ore shipments, and equipment and supply houses are awakening, after a long nap, to realize that there is a growing interest in their merchandise."

Workers, farmers, storekeepers, professional men, industrialists of all kinds, will smile happily on reading that. It means thousands of potential jobs, a vast jump in western merchandising power, a tremendous field for selling services and commodities of very kind and shape—from legal knowledge to groceries. And it likewise means revived tax income for government.

The outlook for mining is better than it has been for many years. That, in turn, considerably improves the outlook for recovery in general.

WHAT WILL BE THE SPENDING POLICY?

The slackened pace of government spending in recent months is not necessarily an indication of what may be expected in the months ahead. But, with the precedent established, it should be easier, and certainly would be wise, to continue the check on outlays. Only a pronounced setback to recovery or an unexpected demand for relief should be permitted to interfere with such a procedure.

The expenditures for the present fiscal year are going to fall short of budget estimates by 3 million dollars or more. The difference will be accounted for largely by the let-up in recovery or emergency expenditures. But action by the house appropriations committee Saturday is a reminder of the fact that any deficiency in expenditure this fiscal year, ending June 30, may be made up in the next. The deficiency supply bill which the committee reported authorizes a total emergency expenditure of 6 billion dollars, which includes unexpended funds of the RFC, the PWA, the farm and relief administrations and other agencies.

The committee's action in specifying the purposes for which certain amounts should go was contrary to the request of the chief executive for discretionary powers as to the use of the entire fund. But, at that, there is left the opportunity for exercise of a wide range of discretion. Thus, in a large way, the President will determine what shall be the expenditure policy for the next year. It is the evident desire of the administration to have available for quick use an abundant supply of funds that may be needed for relief or related purposes. But if it is also the settled policy to hold down expenditures except where an emergency requires that they be made, then there would soon develop an assurance which itself would be a valuable factor in recovery.—Kansas City Times.
