Initiative Proposals Costing State Double

Two Publications of Norris and Betting Amendments Are Necessary, Says Good.

Attorney General Good, in an opinion prepared by Assistant Attorney General Dan Stubbs, informs Secretary of State Swanson that initiative amendments to the constitution should be published two different times to make sure that the constitution and a statute are complied with. Swanson has not decided what course he shall pursue. He has no appropriated funds for publishing amendments proposed at the general election and newspapers will have to await pay from the coming legislature.

There are three proposed amendments this year, the repeal of state prohibition, submitted by vote of the legislature, the one-house nonpartisan legislature, and the pari mutuel gambling amendment.

The attorney general says he does not know why the legislature provided a different method than provided in the constitution for publishing initiative amendments, but the constitution gives the legislature power to enact legislation to "facilitate" operation of initiative amendments. To safeguard in a matter of such importance, the attorney general advises double publication of initiative amendments, both as provided for by sections 22-1910 and 49-202.

Stubbs explained that amendments submitted by the legislature, such as repeal of prohibition, must be published four times in at least one newspaper in each county, immediately preceding the general election, the papers to be designated by the governor.

In addition he holds that initiative amendments should also be published once in every newspaper in the state, by the secretary of state, not later than the first Monday the third month preceding the general election.

Provision is made for doing this work thru the state press association. Secretary Vernon T. Sanford of that body said the records show that an initiative amendment published in 1930, in 405 papers in the state, cost $14,484.83. An amendment submitted by the legislature that same year, published for four weeks prior to election, in 224 papers, cost the state $13,398.85, or a total of $27,883.68 for both kinds of amendments.

He had no estimate of the cost of publishing three amendments this year under the ruling of the attorney general.

Candidate is Allowed 2 Forms of Name

Eugene D. O'Sullivan Permitted to Use Parenthetical, Explanatory Phrase on Ballot.

Deputy Secretary of State Tolen, actively in charge of primary nominations filed with the secretary of state, said the attorney general's department had ruled that the prefix "Dr." a title, cannot be used on the primary ballot in connection with a candidate's name, but that Eugene D. O'Sullivan of Omaha, democratic candidate for governor, has a right to have his name on the ballot just as he signed his certificate of nomination, in this form: Eugene D. (Gene) O'Sullivan.

Tolen said O'Sullivan insisted and that the attorney general's ruling will be complied with.

The decision against the use of "Dr." on the ballot is in accordance with ruling of past attorneys general, and the practice of allowing the ballot to be used as an advertisement of a man's professional business or that he holds some sort of a degree, was stopped many years ago by order of the secretary of state.

The attorney general's ruling that a candidate may use a parenthetical sentence in his name on the ballot is being criticized. That a candidate may sign his name any way he desires, so long as it is his name, is generally admitted, but that he can sign his name in two different ways or with parenthetical or explanatory word, phrase or sentence or the primary or general election ballot is denied by many attorneys. Under the attorney general's ruling it is alleged a candidate can have his name printed on the ballot of John (Doc) Jones, but he cannot have it appear as Dr. John Jones.

It is also argued that O'Sullivan, if permitted to use one explanatory word, after signing his name one way, could have it appear on the ballot Eugene D. (commonly known among his boon companions as Gene) O'Sullivan. And the precedent set would permit Governor Bryan to have his appear on the ballot: Charles W. (generally known as Road Building Charley) Bryan.

Parenthesis is commonly defined as an explanatory or qualifying sentence inserted in a sentence, grammatically complete without it, separated usually by upright curves, by brackets or by dashes.

It is pointed out that the law allows only one qualifying explanation to be made on the ballot and that is where the surname of two or more candidates are "similar in sound or spelling," in which case either of these candidates may have an identifying phrase attached, comprising not more than five words, giving his postoffice address and occupation.

It is alleged Governor Bryan may claim the right to this identifying phrase because "Chet" B. Morearty of Omaha has filed as a democratic candidate for United States senate under the name Charles Bryz:n Morearty. Four years ago Morearty filed as a republican candidate for attorney general under the name Charles B. Morearty. He is now a democrat and is using the word Bryan as a middle name. As the law permitting identification phrases applies only to surnames and not to Christian names, it is alleged strict interpretation of it will not permit the use of identification in the case of Bryan and Morearty.

LEAVING ON TRIP

From Saturday's Daily

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lillie are departing tonight at the close of the work at the shop of Mr. Lillie on a trip to the northwestern section of the state. The trip is in the interests of the candidacy of Mr. Lillie for the democratic nomination to the office of commissioner of public lands and buildings. They will visit a large part of the northwest before returning home and later expect to swing into other sections of the state to present the candidacy of Mr. Lillie to the voters.

James Hammond, publisher of the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal, says:

"Newspaper advertising, next to the news columns of the honest press, can be, and almost generally is, a forceful influence for the community's good. Newspaper advertising is as good for the individual who reads it as for the business which uses it."

"It is almost inconceivable—a community without a newspaper and without advertising. Our design for living is largely moulded by advertising of one kind and another. We know which foods are healthful, through newspaper advertising. Our ideas of home charm, home health, home comforts come from newspaper advertising. The advertiser has developed a sense of pleasant taste."

Advertising is good reading. It is usually good English, even good literature. It is cultural influence. In recent years advertising has been giving us the best in art.

"Society—every class—owes a debt to the man behind intelligent use of newspaper space to advertise his product. For the most part he is trustworthy. The dishonest advertiser is out of the picture, or on the way out. Through self scrutiny, through pressure from newspaper executives and through realization that false, blatant, irresponsible advertising in the long run just doesn't pay, the advertiser has recognized that he has much the same responsibility to be fair, honest and constructive."

"As for the advertiser, his business reflects his advertising wisdom. The chestnut about the mouse trap and the world beating a path to its inventor's door is full of worms. The mousetrap inventor and the butcher and baker and candlestick maker are all in the same boat. Without advertising for their sale, they are sunk."

If local merchants fail to keep people informed on what they offer, can they really blame those who go elsewhere to trade?
