go on to Flint and secure the chasses, driving the same home. They expect to arrive the fore part of the coming week.

To Preserve the Peace

Since the extensive work has been under way in the quarries near Nehawka, there have been a number of drifters from elsewhere congregate here, and not always the most desirable or peaceable type, either. Last Saturday and Sunday two very obstreperous floaters were in town, filled with the new deal contraband and inclined to be more or less quarrelsome. The fact was made known to Sheriff Homer Sylvester and he and Deputy Thomas Walling came down and picked them up, taking them to Plattsburgh, where the rest of the act will have to be recounted in another chapter.

Faithful to Task

The Woman's club of Nehawka, which extends its membership into the country, has been working very industriously for the payment of the construction cost of the new library building, otherwise known as the log cabin, by the giving of moving picture shows each week and last week gave two with good results, and as a result have now advanced their library to a point near settlement in full of the indebtedness incurred at the time it was elected as a CWA project last winter. Forty Years Ago

This summer has been a hot one and no one doubts the fact. But remembering forty years ago, Nels Anderson tells of working in the quarry east of town and that the weather was just as hot then as now, but that it rained some during the latter part of the summer, although not nearly enough to insure a good crop of corn. No doubt many will recall the season of 1894.

Still After Water

The city council of Nehawka have been having test wells sunk in the hope that they may find an adequate supply of water for the new water-works system which is to be commenced as soon as they shall find a supply of water in volume sufficient to supply the needs of the town. In all, three wells have been sunk with most unsatisfactory result, and they are about at their wit's end. To aid in the search for a good vein of water they have secured the services of a water witch in the person of Henry Wallenseick, of Syracuse, who after he had experienced the thrill which comes when operating under the WFPW, declared that at the point indicated water could be found at a depth of 33 feet, but not in sufficient quantities to meet the need, saying that at 43 feet there would be some stone and at 64 feet plenty of water would be found. The drillers are at work now making this latest test well, having passed through the stone and working in blue clay. Just what the result will be, no one knows. Glen Rutledge, who is a member of the town board, says he has no faith in the water witch, but still he has been employed to point the way and let us all hope for good results, for we need the water very badly.

Later an abundance of water has been attained in the fourth test hole.

Pleasant Family Gathering

The meeting of the families of William Schlichtemeier and Pooppe was held at Oteo last Sunday and was attended by 100 or more of the members of the two pioneer families who came to this portion of the country nearly 75 years ago. The organization will be made permanent and will be known as the Schlichtemeier-Pooppe Family Reunion association.
