Find Plenty of Water

In the last test hole, which was bored near the bridge west of town, there was found plenty of water. The hole, which is only six inches in diameter, was given the third degree in the pumping test and found to supply water at the rate of 50 gallons per minute without materially lowering the volume of water in the well. This rate of pumping was continued for a number of hours and was considered to be sufficient to supply the needs of the new waterworks system to be erected. There has been called a meeting of the civic body for Saturday evening, August 4th, to consider bids for the construction of the proposed water system, and soon after letting of the contract work will be started and pushed rapidly forward to completion, in order that the job may be finished before the advent of cold weather. A good deal of employment will be given to local workmen in carrying out the terms of the contract and as part of the plan of expenditure of P W A money. It is highly pleasing to note that water has now been located in sufficient quantity to insure the needs of the new waterworks system, and being located in these times of record-breaking drouth, there should always be a great abundance to take care of the needs of the town for years to come.
