Lawyers are Drafted by Oklahoma High Court

Writing Tentative Opinions to Clear the Docket, Now Fifty Years Behind.

Oklahoma City.—The nation's legal fraternity is watching with interest an unusual experiment in Oklahoma. Fifty years behind on its docket, the state supreme court has drafted several hundred prominent attorneys who will become temporary justices and prepare tentative opinions for approval or rejection of the court. In addition forty district judges and the three judges of the criminal court of appeals are busy writing tentative opinions without additional compensation.

Chief Justice Fletcher Riley, at 41, one of the youngest men in his position in the nation, originated the plan less than a year ago. He now declares it successful and predicts it eventually may be adopted in other states where dockets are congested.

With more than 2,000 cases on the docket of the court, Justice Riley told a recent state bar convention that unless help were received it would require more than fifty years to catch up with the cases altho Oklahoma justices were writing 100 opinions a year each and more than keeping abreast of current filings.

He presented his plan of creating a state judicial council and of using the court's "inherent power" of having district judges and attorneys prepare tentative opinions. A legislative act was not required, he said. His plan received immediate approval.

He added that Oklahoma justices during the last year have written twice as many opinions as courts in Missouri and Kansas and more than in most states. Hundreds of suits are filed annually in Oklahoma due to new questions arising over oil, mining, political, industrial, and agricultural and tax issues.

MYNARD CHURCH NOTICE

General Foch says: "Battles are won the day before." Not only does the general carefully outline his plans, and place his men before he strikes.

The word morale has come to have a large place in the talk about the men who fought because of their physical, mental, and moral condition. And their condition was determined by what they were doing and thinking for a day, indeed many days, before they went into the battle. Did not Wellington say that Waterloo was won at Eton, where he and other generals were educated?

Then when we think of the little church where you first saw the light, and the need of a Savior, should you not say the victory for me was won at Mynard, where I met Satan and defeated him, and have been singing victory all the way?

Sunday, Aug. 12, morning worship at eleven o'clock.

The Sabbath school at ten o'clock. Royal Smith, supt. Come thou and we will do thee good.

Basket dinner in the basement. Covered dish luncheon. Bring sandwiches for your own family.

Quarterly conference in afternoon. Bro. Vannice present. Important business for the future of work of the kingdom. Be present.

FATHER KACZMAREK ILL

Father J. J. Kaczmarek, pastor of the Holy Rosary Catholic church, located on west Pearl street, has been ill for the past several days, being taken very severely ill at the celebration of mass Sunday. The extreme heat with a heart attack has made the condition of Father Kaczmarek very serious and he has been forced to remain at home under medical care. The many friends of this able and distinguished minister will regret to learn of his illness and trust that he may soon be able to resume his active parish work.
