Details Worked Out on Old Age Pension Relief

Report from Cabinet Committee Sent to Roosevelt Favors Pay at Age 65 of $25 to $30.

Washington.—A triple-header old age pension plan was contemplated by President Roosevelt as he drafted his economic security program for congress. The report that went to the president from his cabinet committee was authoritatively said to recommend:

Joint federal-state contributions to enable those already above 65 to maintain themselves at home.

A compulsory old age pension for those under 65 to which employer and employee would contribute to a fund that would provide them with annuities after they pass 65.

A voluntary plan thru which agricultural workers and those not employed in industries which fall under the compulsory plan might pay into a fund that would give them an annuity after they are 65.

The first arrangement was said to contemplate a sliding scale of pensions ranging up to $25 or $30 a month in cities, with smaller sums in small towns and rural communities. The federal and state governments would contribute to the payment of these pensions, probably on a fifty-fifty basis. This was regarded as an inducement to the twenty states which do not now have old age pension plans to set them up.

The federal government would contribute only to those states with pension systems whose standards measured up to those laid down by congress. In this connection, it was argued it would be cheaper to provide a stipulated fund to enable old persons to maintain themselves in their homes than to move them to poor farms.

FIVE NEBRASKANS PICKED

Washington.—Senator Burke was informed by farm credit administration officials of the appointment of five Nebraskans as field inspectors for the emergency crop and feed loan office. They were Charles A. Olson of Minden, Andrew Jackson Galloway of Kilgore, Robert E. Walters of Broken Bow, Wendell P. Bemis of York and William P. Lauridsen of Callaway.

Propose Capitol Fund for Counties Relief Work

Representative Lusinski of Platte Proposes Distribution on Basis of Population.

Lusinski, democratic organization leader in the lower house, Monday introduced a bill calling for redistribution back to the several counties, on population basis, of the remainder of the state capitol fund. He said the amount at this time is $208,600.84.

The measure provides that the money shall be spent in the several counties for relieving distress of unemployed and indigent persons. The distribution, he provides, shall be each county on the ratio its population bears to the population of the state.

Former Governor Bryan and Governor Cochran have indicated that the capitol picture is not complete and that perhaps such portion of the remainder as may be found necessary, should be used for that purpose. It has been pointed out in at least one executive message that 15th street should be widened, that the capitol rooms high and that the frame is inadequate. The city of Lincoln expects to co-operate in this framework program.

A bill introduced by Gillespie again introduces a topic of turmoil in other sessions. It proposes to give to county boards discretionary power in the setting up of agricultural societies receiving public fund aid. At present the law makes it mandatory when required petitions have been filed.

Fleming introduced a bill requiring districts maintaining accredited high schools to elect six members on their boards of education.

Stuteville presented a measure for the registering of bonds of counties, municipalities and school districts when funds are insufficient to meet the obligation. He also introduced a bill setting up similar machinery for irrigation district procedure as to bonds.

McLellan of Hall introduced a bill similar to Lusinski's except that it would distribute the fund among counties in the same proportion as they contributed to it.

Gutowski and others offered two bills, one providing that nobody holding an elective office is eligible to become a candidate for another until he has resigned the first; the other being that candidates filing by petition shall be required to do so thirty days before the primary.

McLellan outlined a three-point plan for financing unemployment relief in Nebraska. He is drafting bills to authorize the state treasurer and the board of educational lands and funds to lend cash on hand to counties for relief purposes at 2 percent interest.

He is drafting another measure to appropriate the more than $200,000 remaining in the capitol construction fund to the counties for the same purpose.

The program was developed, he said, in a conference during the week end with A. F. Buchler, Grand Island publisher and member of the state relief committee, and several Hall county officials.

The legislator suggested loans of state treasury funds might settle the problem arising from the refusal by six Lincoln and Omaha banks to pay interest hereafter on state deposits.

Increase in Prices and Enrollment at U. of N.

Reasons for Requests for Larger Appropriations for the En-suing Two Years.

Lincoln, Nebr.—Increasing prices of all commodities and a rapidly increasing enrollment at the University of Nebraska are given as two important factors bearing on needed appropriations for that school, according to the report and recommendations of the board of regents which have been presented to Governor R. L. Cochran. Copies of the report were received locally this week.

For the two years starting July 1, 1935, the regents are asking an annual appropriation from tax sources of $2,082,300. The annual appropriation for the present biennium is $1,665,840. The requested tax appropriation is a return to the maintenance appropriation of 1931. At that time an appropriation of $155,000 was also made for capital additions.

"Increased prices of all commodities are already a problem to the institution," reads the report. "Further increases will create a much more difficult situation. So the University has a right to expect that the state government in its appropriations will keep in mind the continually increasing costs involved in carrying out the recovery plans of the federal government."

The report points out that the freshman class at the University this year has increased 28 percent and the total first semester enrollment has increased 13 percent. During the last year the University of Nebraska had 10,738 students taking advantage of the opportunities it afforded.

The return of the 1931 maintenance appropriation will enable the University to carry on its present program by providing the amount necessary to meet the present increase in commodity prices, according to the report. It would enable the University to take care of the increased enrollment; take care of special items, such as opening two wards in the medical college hospital at Omaha, to purchase needed equipment such as therapy X-ray equipment at the medical college to aid in the treatment of cancer; and to make salary adjustments in line with the federal salary program. It is not an expansion program.

A considerable portion of the money appropriated by the legislature for the University is not used for strictly educational purposes. The report shows that 35 percent of the money appropriated must be spent for the 14 special service activities that have been placed under the control of the University of Nebraska either by agreements between the state of Nebraska and the federal government or by the state legislature, for which appropriations must be made. Among this group are the experimental substations, the conservation and survey division, the museum, the University hospital, the hog cholera serum plant, and the Legislative Reference Bureau.

"In making these requests the University wishes to emphasize its responsibility in training men and women for citizenship as well as for technical efficiency," declares the report. It also reports that the University of Nebraska has an excellent faculty, perhaps as distinguished as in any previous time, but the continuation of their services depends upon the ability of the school to reward them in both salary and opportunity equal to that afforded in other universities.
