

Probe Party Death

HOOVER today I had a pleasant half-hour visit with the former President the other day, when he came to New York to attend his first meeting of the directors of the New York Life Insurance Company. His whole appearance and manner were those of a man in perfect health and without a care in the world.

"For the first time in my life, I haven't a single responsibility," he said. "For thirty-five years I held one important executive position after another. No man who is responsible to or for others ever gets a real vacation. So may escape for a time from the telephone or the radio, but he can't escape the burden which he must carry with him always.

"It is surprising," he went on, "how much enjoyment and satisfaction a man with no responsibilities can get out of the most trivial things."

We talked about other things, of course, but I won't gossip about those. The things that impressed was that Mr. Hoover, unlike many men who have been accustomed to hard work their lives, has learned how to relax. Tension kills more men than disease.

HAUPTMANN and crime Now that Hauptmann has been convicted and sentenced, I suppose there are still some who question his guilt. There are always perverse-minded folk whose pride it is to set up their own personal beliefs against any authority or court. But leaving that sort of a crank out, I do not see how anyone who has had a chance to read the testimony or to listen to the excellent digests of it over the radio as the trial progressed, can have any doubt.

The clinching evidence was the complete and positive identification of a part of the kidnapper's ladder as a board that had formerly been part of Hauptmann's attic floor. And the story for the search for the source of that and the rest of the ladder is one of the most amazing real-life detective stories I have ever heard of. Any lingering doubt I might have had was resolved when the dramatic tale was told by Arthur Koehler, the Government's wood expert.

With the nicks in the blade of Hauptmann's own plane leaving their clear record on the boards of which the ladder was built, we have another proof of the old adage that "murder will out." No crime fails to leave some clue.

HAPPINESS a by-product There is a whole sermon in the remark that Henry Ford's secretary made the other day. In Mr. Ford's business creed, he said, if one goes out primarily for profit he misses it, profit, like happiness, being a by-product.

Happiness as a by-product will strike many as a new idea; but that is precisely what it comes to. Happiness is not something that can be captured by pursuing it. It is only attained by pursuing something else.

The road to happiness is the road of self-respecting duty, of loyalty to obligations, of unselfish goodwill toward others. It may not be—seldom

AVOCA NEWS

Robert Fitch, Jr., assessor of Cass county was a visitor in Avoca on last Tuesday looking after the matter of surveying and checking up on the streets and alleys which it is proposed soon to change some.

Men to Act Together.
The men of Avoca are to get together and organize a brotherhood. They have already met two times, only to call another meeting, hoping to get the minds of the expected members thinking the same way that something may be done for the benefit of the town and its various activities.

Loses Home and All Furniture.
Elmer McMullin who is employed on the farm of M. M. Straub east of Avoca on last Saturday night suffered the loss of his entire possession with the exception of the family. The house was discovered to be on fire and with no way of fighting it. The home with its contents, all the belongings of the family, were destroyed. There was no insurance. Mr. McMullin is a laborer on the Straub farm and living only as he worked.

Death of Wm. Holmes.
Uncle Wm. Holmes, 85, who has been making his home alone in a house a few miles south of Nehawka and east of Avoca, passed away Monday morning. Mr. Holmes was one of the pioneers of Nebraska and Cass county, he being a cousin of the former Arch Holmes of Rock Bluffs in her palmy days, and resided in the neighborhood of Murray for many years where he was employed in the blacksmith business before Murray was a town.

SPEEDING SEED LOAN BILL.
Washington.—Farm leaders in congress sought to obtain unanimous consent to speed an appropriation bill to passage to permit an early start on seed loans in drought areas. The president last week signed the bill authorizing 60 millions in appropriations for emergency seed loans. He suggested, however, that to prevent further unbalancing of the budget, the funds be provided from the proposed work relief appropriation. The work relief bill, however, is so entangled that middle western senators and representatives fear seed loans could not be made available quickly enough if they wait for its passage.

CLAIMS PORTRAIT IS BOGUS.
Washington.—George J. Shepard of Washington was held for the federal grand jury after a son of former President Cleveland had testified at a U. S. commissioner's hearing that Shepard had sold him an allegedly fake portrait of the late president. Shepard was held under $10,000 bond. The navy recently said a painting of John Paul Jones presented to it by Shepard was not the work of its supposed author, Benjamin West. The complaining witness, Richard F. Cleveland of Baltimore, said he paid $150 to Shepard for the Cleveland portrait in 1932 while the latter was going under the name of "Vernon."
