BISHOP RUMMEL DEPARTING

Omaha.—Bishop Joseph F. Rummel of Omaha, head of the Omaha diocese of the Catholic church for seven years, is preparing for his acceptance of his new position as archbishop of New Orleans.

He said he did not expect to leave Omaha until after Easter. "The appointment," said Bishop Rummel, "came as a complete surprise. While I am supremely grateful for this signal mark of confidence, I am at the same time loath to leave the diocese of Omaha, which I have learned to love during the nearly seven years of my administration," he said.

Bishop Rummel, 58, reorganized the Omaha diocese and raised a million dollar fund to finance diocesan work. As a result of that drive new buildings were constructed, work on the cathedral was renewed, and the Catholic diocesan bureau was established.

He came here in 1928 and two years later, as a result of the bishop's invitation, the first national eucharistic congress in this country in nineteen years was held in Omaha. Bishop Rummel has been a leader in Catholic action, and is vice chairman of the Episcopal committee on lay work of the National Catholic Welfare conference.
