Part of the money derived from this source goes to those who make the poppies, while the balance of the proceeds will be used principally for flowers to decorate the graves of the veterans of all wars in the local cemetery. Everyone should give their support to the poppy sale and thus help the living veterans decorate the graves of the departed war heroes.

A post card or letter addressed to the manager of the Greenwood Baseball Team will reach them and bring a prompt reply. So don't be backward, you managers of baseball teams; start the ball rolling and Greenwood will field it.

WELLS LOOKS AT NEW DEAL New York.—H. G. Wells, in an appraisal of the new deal, finds in it what to him are the unique elements of "brawling public discussion" and the comparative lack of large race or class antagonisms.

In a series of magazine articles, the first of which appears Friday, Wells sums up his inspection of the new deal:

"Everywhere we see the drive toward a new world order producing either on the one hand inadequate but considerable changes accompanied by protestations that nothing more is being done than a return to dear old conditions, or on the other hand effusive declarations of new deals, new eras, new regimes and social revolutions, masking very serious attempts to restore the lost order of things."

"The hysteria of revolution can be extraordinarily like the hysteria of reaction, and very different pretensions and subtleties may mask resistances essentially the same."

After looking over the English-speaking world scene, and noting that the Anglo-Saxon mentality is "almost unconsciously progressive and expansive," the British author and historian declares:

"There are two aspects of the American effort that seem to me unique. The first is that the struggle to reconstruct America goes on in an atmosphere of unbridled public discussion—brawling public discussion."

"The second aspects of the English-speaking situation as compared with the rest of the world is the comparative unimportance of large mass antagonisms. There is no widespread conception of a class war as in Russia, or of racial incompatibility as in Germany, or xenophobia as in Italy or Japan."

The Dorcas Society of the Christian church are the sponsors of the move to paint the church building, cut out some of the trees in the church yard and plant a barberry hedge as well as other ornamental shrubs and plants about the church building, including a number of weeping willows, which make very good foundation planting, according to the latest rules of landscape gardening.

Seeds should be sown in shallow drills, even more shallow than the size of the seed would seem to indicate. Keep the soil moist during the germination period, but don't plant until the soil has first become warm and dry.

Let the grassy seedlings grow until they are 2 to 3 inches tall, then thin them out to an inch apart for a starter, and as they approach edible size, pull every other one as you can use them, and leave the rest to mature in the ground.

By supplementing onion sets with onion seed a supply of young onions from seed will be ready for the table by the time green onions from sets have been used up. Besides this, you will be able to raise a few large onions by leaving some to mature.

Onions need the richest and most friable soil in the garden. It can't be made too rich, and monthly application of plant food will add vastly to the harvest. They respond well to cultivation.

Two or three rows of seed onions will furnish an average family with green onions for the whole summer, and later will give a good supply of 1-inch size bulbs which are ideal for boiling.

AUBURN IS ELIGIBLE

Washington.—Rep. Luckey said Auburn, Neb., has been placed in a list of cities eligible for inclusion in a new postoffice building program.

Credit Corporation Not Part of Temporary Plan

George J. Thomas, Secretary of South Omaha Production Credit Corporation Explains Plan.

Correcting an impression that seems to be common in this vicinity, Mr. George J. Thomas, secretary-treasurer of the South Omaha Production Credit association of South Omaha, Nebraska, said that the association is not a temporary "emergency" or "relief" organization and does not loan government funds.

According to Mr. Thomas, some persons here have confused the PCA with the county emergency crop and feed loan office.

The secretary-treasurer explained that the South Omaha Production Credit association is intended to provide for the farmers of this territory a permanent source of low-interest, short-term credit for agricultural purposes. The interest rate is 5 per cent a year. Funds are obtained from private investors through the Federal Intermediate Credit bank of Omaha.

Adequate security is required for every PCA loan, Mr. Thomas declared, and every borrower is a stockholder and has a voice in the association's affairs. Eventually it is expected the entire production credit system will be owned by the farmer-borrowers.

The South Omaha PCA serves farmers in Douglas, Washington, Burt, Dodge, Saunders, Cass, and Sarpy counties.

Entirely separate are the county emergency crop and feed loan committees. They have been set up as temporary governmental agencies to care for only those farmers who cannot obtain credit elsewhere for the purchase of seed and feed.

Green Onions Can be Grown from the Seed

Soaking Over Night Speeds Germination; Sow Thinly; Cheapest and Easiest Method.

Sowing onion seed is the cheapest and easiest way to furnish a continuous crop of young green sprouts after the first crop of "sets" has been used. Sets are the best for early crops, because they grow so quickly.

The young onion is the most popular and most widely used of all green vegetables, and a supply is needed in the home garden.

Sow the seeds as soon as the soil can be worked. Sow it thinly in the first place and save the necessity of thinning later. The seed is rather slow to germinate, and soaking it overnight in lukewarm water is an ancient practice of practical value to start the seed growing. The soaking will cause the seeds to mash together and be hard to handle, but by draining off on a towel this can be avoided without drying the seed again.

Seeds should be sown in shallow drills, even more shallow than the size of the seed would seem to indicate. Keep the soil moist during the germination period, but don't plant until the soil has first become warm and dry.

Let the grassy seedlings grow until they are 2 to 3 inches tall, then thin them out to an inch apart for a starter, and as they approach edible size, pull every other one as you can use them, and leave the rest to mature in the ground.

PARTIES two or three

Until the present administration in Washington, the main difference between the republican and democratic parties was that one was in the seat of power and the other was out. A man could be a good republican and accept the democratic platform of 1932, and vice-versa. The vote that elected Mr. Roosevelt was not so much pro-democratic as it was a vote for change.

The acts and policies of the administration in the past two years have made a real difference between the two great parties. The democrats, throwing their platform overboard, embarked on policies which sharply differentiate them from republicans, thus putting the republican party definitely on the conservative side of the political fence.

The real political issue of 1935, therefore, seems likely to be between a distinctly conservative party and a party which, if not definitely radical, is at least tinged strongly with radicalism. If the republicans try to introduce radical ideas, they will again be indistinguishable from the democrats. If the democrats swing too far toward radicalism they will lose great blocks of their conservative voters; but if they do not, they are threatened by a radical third-party movement.

DEFINITIONS three classes

What, precisely, do we mean by such terms as conservative, liberal and radical?

A conservative, is, I think, a person who has become adjusted to his environment, whatever that may be, and who is able, therefore, to take a detached view of the world and its people. Such a person is opposed

DISCUSSION everywhere

In the past three weeks I have talked with literally hundreds of the best-informed men in the country. They are the publishers and responsible editors of the nation's leading newspapers. Each of them told me the same story. From coast to coast, the everyday people are discussing the nation's political, economic and social affairs with a degree of freedom that has not been noticeable for more than two years.

"The panic is over," said one. "The blind fear of ruin has passed, and with it has passed the willingness to follow anybody who promised to lead them out of trouble."

The American people are still in trouble, but they are discussing the way out with clearer eyes and a better understanding, not only of the causes of their troubles but of the validity of the various plans offered to alleviate them.

To my mind that is the most hopeful sign of the times. America is coming back to its own when its people begin to do their own political thinking.

POLITICS the battleground

Anyone who wants to change conditions which affect any material number of people must approach his effort politically or he won't get to first base. That is the American method. If he has the votes behind him he can, perhaps, accomplish the change he advocates; if he hasn't the votes his hands are tied.

That is why Upton Sinclair and Father Coughlin and Huey Long cut such an important figure in present-day discussions of public affairs. Each of them has a considerable body of potential votes behind him. Upton Sinclair had more than 800,000 voters back of his EPIC scheme in California; nobody can guess how many Father Coughlin or Senator Long might control, if it came to a showdown.

The principal question raised in political discussions today is whether or not there will be a third party ticket in the field in 1936, led by one of the gentlemen just named or some other radical. If such a third party is launched it will draw votes from among those who otherwise would naturally support Mr. Roosevelt. He will certainly be renominated, if he lives, but has he such a solid block of democratic partisans behind him that he can win if the radical fringe is trimmed off? Enough, for example, to offset the 13 1/2 million votes, which the elections of 1934 demonstrated, stick to the republican party through thick and thin?

OUTLOOK real horse race

My belief is that there are more conservatives among those who voted the democratic ticket in 1932 than anybody imagines. I believe, also, that there is a much stronger element of liberals in the irreducible minimum of 13 1/2 million republicans than is generally thought.

I think that the ultimate aim of all political parties and groups is the same—to find ways to accomplish the greatest good for the greatest number of people. The only real differences of opinion concern, not the objectives, but the way of reaching them.

I think those differences of opinion

Here's a Jump-Out-Of-Bed Breakfast

WHEN he wakes up in the morning, does he feel about half dead, and alarm clock clamor scolding, pull the covers over his head? Does he want to sleep still longer, to stay cuddled in his nest, and ignoring calls of hunger, try to get a further rest? Well, then, try this on the fellow, and you'll surely make a hit, for you'll find he'll wake up mellow and not hesitate a bit. But he'll fling away his covers and jump out of bed with zest, if the sweet aroma hovers of this breakfast at its best.

Ham Waffles: Beat three egg yolks well and add two cups of diluted evaporated milk. Sift together two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt, and add with one-third cup melted butter. Add one cup finely-chopped cooked ham, and fold in three stiffly-beaten egg whites. Bake as any waffles. This recipe makes eight of them.

Fresh Coffee
One of the great points of this breakfast, and of all breakfasts, is to have your coffee fresh. That means that it must be made from coffee that has been vacuum packed because that is the only modern method of keeping coffee absolutely fresh until the can is opened. There are many brands of coffee that are vacuum packed, so you can choose the one you like best and make a hit with that husband of yours with this appetizing better breakfast.
