No Shortage of Labor Says Burlington Head

Ed Flynn Stops in Lincoln for Short Time on Way From Tour to Western Lines of Railroad.

Out for another visit to the recent flood area of the Republican valley and a trip to Cdo, Sheridan, Billings and Denver, Ed. Flynn, vice president of the Burlington, and other road officials stopped at Lincoln Wednesday.

Anxious to hear about latest estimates of Nebraska's wheat crop Flynn admitted business was a little better already as the result of the harvest, but he said, "That isn't saying much." Seventy-one grain cars were loaded Tuesday on lines west and the rail head compared that figure with records of better years when as many as 500 and 600 cars were loaded in a day.

Flynn mentioned that five line changes were being made between Oxford and Hagler, but that aside from grading contracts, all other work was being done by the system's own departments. Asked if there was a noticeable shortage of labor, Flynn declared there was plenty of it to be obtained.

In Chicago, he said, livestock officials estimated about 25 percent less business this year, due to curtailment of cattle and swine herds a year ago. The hog census will not be normal, the railroad official estimated, before next spring, and it will take longer to build up cattle herds.

In his car were H. R. Clark, engineer of maintenance, A. W. Newton, chief engineer and G. A. Haggender, bridge engineer, all of Chicago; H. H. Urbach, superintendent of motive power, Lincoln, and General Manager J. H. Aydelott of Omaha. F. R. Mullen, general superintendent, Lincoln, went as far as Hastings.

Plattsmouth offers a splendid market for farm produce of all kinds.
