POLICE DOLLED UP

From Wednesday's Daily

The members of the Plattsmouth police force today appeared in the snappy new uniforms that were ordered some time ago and which gives the law enforcers a truly metropolitan appearance.

Chief of Police Libershal was the first to make his debut in the new clothes and to receive the admiration of the residents of the business section in the fine appearance that they gave.

The new uniforms will make it much easier for strangers and those seeking the services of the law to distinguish the officers than when they wore ordinary plain clothes. The uniforms are of khaki color with the Sam Brown belt and the caps with gold trimmings in keeping with the rest of the uniform.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of extending our heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted us during the illness, death and burial of our husband and father. We especially thank all for the many beautiful floral offerings.—Mrs. Anna Beck, Mrs. Troy McFadden, Mrs. P. R. Ledabrand, Mrs. C. A. Bell, Marion Beck, Virginia Beck.

"Paul (Worker with Hand and Brain.)"

Acts 20:33-35; Phil. 4:4-13.

The new born church at Pentecost reached a crisis in a few short years; it was confined to a very small area of Palestine, and must enlarge its boundaries, to include the whole world, or else fail of its mission. It was appealing principally to Jews. The Christian church awaited some powerful genius to arise in its midst, who, by the leading of the Holy Spirit should guide the church out of its confinement into a glorious vision of its possibilities and powers. This man appeared in Saul of Tarsus, and how he came to be the greatest single Christian that has ever appeared on earth is one of the most fascinating stories ever recorded.

Born in a great city, known for its wealth, commerce and university, he came from a strict Jewish family, Pharisee of Pharisees; he was also brought up in a home of piety and of character, taught the stern principles of correct living as embraced in the Jewish faith. His father had obtained Roman citizenship, which gave Paul all the privileges of a free Roman citizen. When twelve years of age, he was sent to Jerusalem to attend a rabbinical school, living with his sister, who was married. There he had the greatest teacher that ever taught in Jerusalem—Gamaliel.

Here he received extensive training in the meaning of and interpretation of the Old Testament scriptures. (Acts 22:3; 5:34.) The foregoing will explain the fanatical zeal displayed in persecuting the church. Having attained the age of 30 years, he was eligible to be elected to the Sanhedrin, and was elevated to that office, in which he exerted a great influence, always voting in the affirmative on matters pertaining to his religion, to keep it undefiled and to destroy anything or anybody that would threaten the same.

So we find him giving consent to persecute Stephen—in fact taking an active part in it. But to that event we ascribe his conversion. This fury was the final stage before Paul's conversion, for at this time he was deep in his heart, kicking against the goad. (Acts 26:14.) His conversion is so familiar to Bible students that we omit it, and give more attention to his labors. Having given up everything to gain Christ, he had to fall back on his trade as a tent-maker to support himself while carrying on his missionary work. He could truly say he was not preaching the gospel for the money that was in it; he had no congregation to support him, for he was organizing churches mostly among the poorer classes. That brings us to following him on his several missionary tours. The first tour took him and Barnabas and John Mark, to Cyprus, the home of Barnabas, and lasted two years. After that we find him in Antioch in Pisidia, where he preached that great sermon on "Justification by Faith." (See Acts 13:15-41.) Here the church leaves its confines and breaks over all barriers and "turns to the Gentiles" according to the Lord's command. (Acts 13:46-57.)

The second missionary journey, in company with Silas, took him over into Europe, where he labored in the great cities of Philippi, Thessalonica, Athens, Corinth as far as Ephesus. Timothy was added to the company. He must have suffered terrible persecution from time to time, during these three years of labor. (See II Cor. 11:23-27.) Some of his greatest addresses, masterpieces in themselves, were delivered in these cities. During all these years, Paul showed his marvelous genius as organizer of churches. The third missionary journey took place in 52 A. D., mostly in the populous centers; for three years he stayed at Ephesus, and was for the most part alone.

Then we see Paul as a writer. That the pen is mightier than the sword is fully demonstrated in Paul's case. Where are the great empires of Nineveh, Babylon, Greece and Rome? The empire founded by Christ and developed by Paul, built not on power or might, but on faith of a living Christ, has no equal in the world's history. Its laws "are perfect, converting the soul . . . making wise the simple . . . rejoicing the heart . . . is pure, enlighten the eyes . . . enduring forever . . . righteous altogether." (See Psalm 19:7-10.)

Paul's thirteen epistles show a depth of wisdom, unsurpassed by any man. They are inexhaustible wells and springs of wisdom, of doctrine, of beauty; fitted for all conditions, for all people, under all circumstances; read by more men, translated into more tongues, believed and practiced more universally than any one man's writings. They portray men's deepest sorrow and the highest state of joy. No critic has ever disproved any statement made by Paul. They have comforted the sorrowing, encouraged the depressed, aided the weak and uplifted the low. All this was accomplished because Christ had full possession of the man, by his own testimony, given in his letter to the Philippians.

His example is worthy of emulation. The church never had a greater expositor of her origin, power, privileges and final victory than Paul, who could say: "I can do all things through Christ." (Phil. 4:13.)

mand for all the corn they are able to pick up just now. There is an especially heavy demand for good yellow corn just now and those having plenty of it to sell are in luck. While most of the harvesting and threshing has been completed, there is some grain which has not been cut and at this time the wheat is very ripe and has to be handled with the utmost care as it shatters very easily. On some ground this year's crop has been volunteer from last year's cutting, proving better than that raised from sown ground, as the ground was harder and shed the rain early in the spring when the amount of moisture was too great and resulted in the straw becoming too heavy, which caused it to fall or lodge before cutting time.

School to Open Next Tuesday
It has been decided by the Board of Education of the Nehawka consolidated schools to open the schools this coming Tuesday, September 3rd. Due to Labor day falling on Monday and the large number desiring to attend the state fair that day, the opening is deferred one day.

The teachers selected for the coming year are C. E. Stimbart, superintendent; Ruth Jones, principal; Glen De Doyt, agriculture; Clarice Huds, high school; Mildred Wolfe, music and English; Vivian Hughes, primary; Berle Stone and Ruth Hall, grades. Mark Burton will again be caretaker of the school property and janitor.

A large enrollment is expected this year due to the increased number of families living in this vicinity, some of whom are engaged in river work and work at the stone quarries.

Home from Hospital
Mrs. Raymond Creamer, who has been troubled with repeated attacks of appendicitis, went to the Clarkson hospital some time since after a particularly serious attack, and submitted to an operation for the removal of the troublesome appendix. She has now recovered to such an extent that she was able to return home last week and is continuing to snow good improvement from day to day. Her friends will be glad to know that she will soon be back in her usual good health and freed of the worry of further trouble of this nature.

Delegate to National Convention
In the election of delegates to the national American Legion convention to be held at St. Louis next month, held at the closing session of the state Legion convention at Beatrice on Wednesday, William Kruger was named to represent the 12th district. This is a fitting recognition of the splendid work Bill has done as 12th district commander during the past few months, this district receiving the award for greatest increase in membership over a period of three years. Mr. Kruger has been active in Legion circles for a long time and doubly so now that he has accepted the responsibilities of district commander, which also includes membership in the state executive committee. He has paid a visit to every post in the district comprising Cass, Otoe, Lancaster and Seward counties since his election to the office of commander early this year.
