NATURALIZING THE NARCISSUS gardens, particularly the latter vigorous growers and quickly naturalizing themselves. They should be used liberally. From these and other types have been developed a large number of named poetic varieties. All of these are fine material and the differences between them are so small as to appeal only to the discerning eye there are differences not at all noticeable to the average gardener. The native bluebell is beautiful combined with the later poet's and when to the two is added the rosy sprays of bleeding heart as is now often done, a spring garden picture hard to beat is produced and once seen will not be forgotten. Both the bluebell and bleeding hearts lose their foliage and become dormant even before the narcissus and the space they occupy can be used for shallow rooted annuals in late summer. The phlox retains its foliage all year. Plant poet's narcissus by the hundred. Nothing is finer for bouquets in spring and the poet's has better substance than many of the other daffodils.

CONSIDERS JOINT SALES

Omaha.—District Judge Dineen took under advisement late Friday the question of whether beer and liquor may be sold legally in the same premises.

The Judge gave no indication when he would announce his ruling on a suit brought by nineteen Omaha beer and liquor dispensers to prevent enforcement of the section in Nebraska's new liquor control law which prohibits sale of both beer and liquor on the same premises.

After hearing W. C. Dorsey of Omaha, attorney for the dispensers, argue the controversial section was "idiotic, ridiculous and leading to intemperance," Robert D. Flory of Albia, attorney for the liquor commission, admitted he didn't know what the "legislature's idea was," but added that the law makers "evidently thought the separation of beer and liquor would be to the best interest of the state."
