Cochran Silent on Time of His Special Session

Shall the Governor's Call Limit the Lawmakers to Gas Tax for Old Age Pensions?

Members of the legislature who are to be called to meet in special session to raise funds for an old age pension are still in the dark concerning the probable date. Governor Cochran gave no further indication late Friday as to the date of the session. If it is necessary to await action of congress regarding further appropriation for the federal "social security" administration and co-operation with states in old age pension, unemployment insurance and other kindred topics, the legislature would not be called until sometime in January, after congress acts, if further action is necessary. If congressional action proves unnecessary, the session could be called by the governor any time during the fall.

If the governor should be convinced, as some are trying to do, that a set-up to meet federal funds for unemployment insurance is necessary, the session may be somewhat hastened, as it is represented that $2,000,000 in payroll taxes will be collected by the federal government from Nebraska in 1936 and that the state will not get back its promised 90 percent of that amount unless it cents a mile for once going to and returning from a special session. It is assumed that proposed bills will be prepared in advance and passed upon for constitutionality before they are submitted to the special session.

From the governor's statement it is understood that he not only desires to disburse the $1,500,000 now on hand in the state treasury, most of it raised by the now unconstitutional one cent tax on gasoline, but that he proposes to disburse this for the benefit of the aged destitute in the form of a pension, so far as it will go, and in addition to appropriate other funds to augment those on hand or funds yet to be collected from gasoline and liquor fees.

Corrective and emergency legislation only is to be included in the governor's call for a special session. The objects of the special session have not been outlined by the governor as they will be when he issues a formal proclamation.

The state constitution, not changed by the unicameral amendment adopted by a vote and the people, still contains this provision:

"The governor may, on extraordinary occasion, convene the legislature by proclamation, stating therein the purpose for which they are convened, and the legislature shall enter upon no business except that for which provides machinery for accepting and using that amount for unemployment insurance.

Governor Cochran, in a prepared statement, said he is investigating national legislation and the Nebraska supreme court decision declaring the act of the last legislature void, so far as they concern state old age assistance, before he fixes the time for a special session of the legislature.

Studied in Advance.

Members of the legislature may possibly be in session some time, yet they are limited to $100 pay and ten they were called together."

May Dictate Details.

The question may arise as to whether the governor has power to dictate in his call the details of a bill he desires passed. If he should decide that he desires funds raised for an old age pension by taxation of gasoline and words his call accordingly, can the legislature ignore that source of revenue and adopt some other method of raising the money, such as a sales or income or a property tax and would a departure from the governor's call render any such act of the legislature void as not being germane to the call?

If the governor should in general terms ask for an appropriation of funds for old age pensions, legislators say there is no doubt but what they could use their own judgment in arriving at details of the legislation.

In a decision rendered in 1901 the supreme court of Nebraska held the legislature in special session can transact no business except that included in "objects of the proclamation calling the session." It also said:

"That the entire proclamation of the governor convening the legislature in special session should be considered in determining whether any given act at such session is germane to the objects stated in the call of the executive."

Appropriation of the funds now on hand derived from the illegal 1 cent gas tax, also beer and liquor tax funds which have been collected, "and will be collected," for the benefit of aged destitute, is promised by Governor Cochran in his statement. As forty days are allowed for filing a motion for rehearing and a suit is not deemed finally disposed of until such motion is disposed of, this statement of the governor is construed by some to mean that the 1 cent gasoline tax will continue to be collected until a motion for rehearing is disposed of. This might add enough to increase the total now on hand to around $2,000,000, yet this would not go far if there proves to be 20,000 or more aged eligible to a pension, so other sources of revenue may be necessary to pay what some estimate as $9,000,000 a year, if the $30 a month pension remains as fixed in the O'Brien pension law, a law not disturbed by the supreme court, and the state is called upon to pay half and the federal government half.

BUSINESS GAINS CONTINUE

New York.—Dun & Bradstreet in its weekly review of business and industry said that favorable influences this week enabled the fall season to gather momentum. "The auspicious start which the fall season made last week has been enabled to gather momentum rapidly under the favoring influence of expanding consumer income and low inventory positions," the review said. "Retail sales continued to rise, with a wider variety of merchandise included in the demand, which leaned strongly toward quality goods. Rising quotations and under-estimated consumers' requirements forced merchants into wholesale markets to fill broken lines and to cover as far as possible. In contrast to the declining trend a year ago, industrial operations were set higher."
