Old Time Newspaper Man Retires from Active Labor

Henry Huckins, editor and publisher of the Lincoln Herald, with fifty-eight years of work in the newspaper craft as printer and editor, is announcing his withdrawal from active work.

Mr. Huckins began his newspaper work in Nebraska City in 1885, when he edited the Stockmen's Journal-Times, a penny daily, when that city was a packing center.

His next newspaper venture was the Nebraska Independent, which was sold later to Frank D. Eager and by him to George W. Berge.

The Weekly Blizzard made its appearance in Lincoln, to be absorbed with the Herald when Mr. Huckins bought the latter from Mr. Cullen.

Mr. Huckins has pursued from the beginning a policy of free lance writing and editing, and was noted for the vigor and pungency of his style.

"I am just as well physically as ever," he said Monday, "but I am nearing 80 and a bit tired of mental tasks. I have had a lot of fun at the business, and now I am ready to quit and take things easy."

G. O. P. STAMPS BANNED

Washington.—Three of the cartoon stamps issued by New York republican group, but repudiated by the republican national committee, were banned as "unavailable" in an opinion by Solicitor Crowley of the post-office department.

President Roosevelt as "Frankenstein," "an astonished and frightened individual bearing an intended resemblance to the president observing a giant labeled 'bureaucratic government,' dressed in Russian costume, treading upon industrial plants labeled 'United States business.'"

"The president slyly lighting a cigarette from a taper composed of a scroll labeled 'Constitution of the United States.'"

"The President and Mrs. Roosevelt seated on the democratic donkey at the very edge of a precipice... both portrayed as laughing while the former holds before him a megaphone and Mrs. Roosevelt holds aloft a communistic banner."

Two other stamps, also stuck on letters presented for mailing at the New York postoffice, were passed as available "as they relate solely to abstractions."
