CHAPTER XXXIV

Promptly at four o'clock on Friday afternoon, Mrs. Knight and Carl walked into Dr. Young's office.

"Right on time, I see," smiled the dentist, as his assistant prepared Carl for his treatment.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Knight, "and from now on, we will always be on time until Carl's teeth are in good condition. How does his mouth look, Doctor, after last week's extraction?"

"Fine," replied the dentist. "The gum is practically healed now. By the way, last week you asked me to explain the advantages of a space maintainer, didn't you?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Knight. "You said you might put one in Carl's mouth, I believe."

"That's right," said the dentist. "Quite often, the early extraction of a baby tooth, especially a baby molar, retards the regular and normal development of the child's jaw. Also, the teeth on either side of the space have a tendency to tip or shift into the opening. Not only do the teeth on either side of the space shift or move, but quite often the tooth in the opposite jaw directly above or below the space will elongate simply because it has no tooth to bite against. That is what may happen in Carl's mouth. You see, this upper baby molar does not strike against any lower teeth since I removed the lower baby molar. Therefore, in a very short time, possibly a few weeks or months, this upper molar may drop down out of place.

"By putting a space maintainer in Carl's mouth, I will not only prevent the shifting of the teeth in his upper jaw, but will prevent the upper tooth from dropping down out of its proper position in the upper jaw."

Dr. Young picked up a small plaster model from his cabinet.

"This," he said, "is a simple form of space maintainer. It consists of two thin gold bands fitted to the teeth on either side of the space. This heavy gold bar is attached to both gold bands. Thus, you see, the bar prevents the two teeth from tipping and it also prevents the upper molar from drifting downward, because every time Carl closes his mouth, the upper molar will strike against the bar.

"The main thing about this appliance is that it does just what its name implies—it maintains the natural space in the jaw so that when the permanent successor erupts, it can have plenty of room to come in properly."

"Please make one for Carl," said Mrs. Knight. "It will at least partially compensate for past neglect."

Shirley Salutes National Milk Week

WHILE motion picture stars are noted for their dependence on milk in the diet, most consistent of Hollywood milk fans is the nation's favorite—Shirley Temple.

Throughout the country from November 14th to 20th millions of dairy farmers, milkmen and their customers honor the country's 25,000,000 dairy cows which provide the "most nearly perfect food."

The medical profession has repeatedly emphasized that a larger per capita consumption of milk would improve the general level of public health while governments have urged larger per capita milk consumption as a means of improving economic conditions as well as the health of their people.

It has been reliably estimated according to the Milk Industry Foundation that 2,000,000 people in this country are alive today because of the improvement in purity resulting from added cleanliness and sanitary precautions of both producers and milk companies in the last two and a half decades. The objectives of National Milk Week with its slogan "Keep Youthful—Drink Milk" are to make the public more conscious of the importance of milk in the diet and to suggest an extra glass of milk per person every day during Milk Week.

An extra glass of milk daily translated into dollars would mean an increase of more than $5,000,000 in dairy farmers' pockets.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

Spoken from the Heart Out

By IRVIN S. COBB

PROBABLY most of the readers of this department are very familiar with this story, but it is so typical of negro wit and psychology that I must review it here. A negro who worked as an extra at one of the larger motion picture studios was called upon to enter a camouflaged lion's den. The scene was purporting to show an African jungle and the negro was supposed to be at the mercy of a ferocious lion. Now this particular lion was what is termed a performing lion and quite docile. However as the group of players and directors approached the cage, the lion emitted a most terrifying series of roars.

The prospect of entering the cage in view of these blood curdling sounds, did not greatly appeal to the undersized negro. He demurred at it quite positively.

"What's the matter with you?" said the assistant director. "That lion's not going to hurt you. That lion was brought up on milk."

"So wuz I brung up on milk," said the unhappy ducky, "but I eats meat once in a while now."

big day. There are always interesting features on the program that are instructive as well as highly entertaining. See his ad elsewhere in this issue and be sure to attend if you are interested in how to cut the cost of farming operations.

The Alvo Girls Quartet was heard in two vocal numbers on the afternoon program at the Callahan church Sunday afternoon for the program sponsored by the Cass County Christian Fellowship association.

A number of Alvo people were present for the meeting.

Costly Home Fire

The Lee Coatman home was partially destroyed by fire of unknown origin, causing a heavy loss. They had recently purchased the home and had just finished repairing and redecorating it inside and out.

A cabinet washing machine, oil stove and other items of furniture were badly damaged by the flames.

The Coatman family were visiting Lee's parents at Elmwood at the time of the fire.

The Elmwood and Eagle fire departments aided in extinguishing the fire.

Mrs. Coatman was honored with a kitchen shower Friday afternoon at the church basement. She received many lovely and useful gifts from friends and relatives.

Several students from the school entertained the members of the Woman's Reading club with a miscellaneous Armistice day program at the home of Mrs. S. C. Boyles when she was hostess to the club Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Boyles served delicious ice cream, cake and coffee as a fitting climax to the afternoon events.

Miss Will Boyles of Lincoln was a guest at club.

Mrs. Betty Appleman of Lincoln was also present for the club meeting.
