DENTAL SOCIETY

CHAPTER XLI

"Last week," said Jack, as he settled himself in Dr. Young's chair, "you told me you would explain what a pyorrhea pocket is. How about it?"

"A pyorrhea pocket," said Dr. Young, "is a pocket or opening formed between the tooth root and the gum. Normally, the gum tissue hugs the neck of the tooth very tightly. If it becomes irritated it may become infected and lose its close contact with the tooth and thus leave a pocket between the tooth and the gum tissue.

"For instance, if tartar is allowed to accumulate about the necks of the teeth, it irritates the gums, which may then become infected. As the infection proceeds more deeply under the gum margins, it destroys the tissues. Once established, the infective process becomes more or less protected and the pocket becomes deeper. Finally, the disease reaches the deeper membrane, known as the periodontal membrane."

"What is the periodontal membrane?" interrupted Jack.

"The periodontal membrane," explained the dentist patiently, "is a layer of tissue which lies between the root of the tooth and the bone. Contrary to popular opinion, teeth are not rigidly fixed in the jaws. They are attached to their bony sockets by means of the periodontal membrane. This membrane is made up of thousands of minute fibers. One end of these fibers is attached to the tooth root and the other end is attached to the bony socket. These fibers are so arranged as to enable each tooth to move slightly in its socket during use, acting as a cushion to absorb the shocks of mastication.

"When this membrane becomes injured or irritated through any cause, it loses its resistance and becomes detached from the tooth. This, of course, makes the pocket larger and deeper. Hard, nodular, flintlike, brownish particles of tartar may form on the tooth root. These deposits, called serum calculus, add to the irritation and increase the tendency to destruction until at last the bone becomes exposed to infection. The broken-down tissue cells, tissue fluids, and bacteria, fill the pocket, forming pus which flows out and is expressed from beneath the gum margin. The bony socket about the tooth disintegrates, the tooth becomes loose, and eventually it is lost provided it does not receive the proper care."

"Can pyorrhea be cured?" asked Jack.

"It can be cured if treatment is started early enough," replied the dentist. "Pyorrhea conditions resulting from local causes, such as tartar, traumatic occlusion and ill-fitting bridgework, if taken in time can be cured. Some pyorrhea conditions may be associated with systemic diseases and may be more complicated. This type of pyorrhea is much harder to cure. Naturally, in this type of pyorrhea the systemic disease itself should be treated along with the mouth condition."

TRY TO GAIN QUINS CONTROL

CALANDER, Ont., April 22 (UP)—Dr. Allen Roy Dafeo said today that he believed "outside forces" are trying to obtain control of the Dionne quintuplets and their $600,000.

The quints' physician said he felt that these efforts lay at the bottom of the difficulties between Miva Dionne, father of the girls and their board of guardians. Dafeo, who is a member of the board, did not specify who he meant by "outside forces."

Dafeo, through an Ottawa attorney has asked the attorney general to make a judicial investigation of the quints' affairs and the handling of their money.

"If Dionne was anxious about the babies' affairs he should have attended the board of guardians meeting instead of petitioning the Ontario attorney general for a judicial investigation," Dafeo said. "When quints were poor we had no trouble, but now that they have $600,000 in Ontario government bonds it is a different story."

Entertained for Easter Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Tool entertained at their home in Murdock on Easter day, enjoying a pleasant visit from their children and grandchildren. A fine Easter dinner was served. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. George Work and children, of Omaha; W. P. Meyers and wife of Sioux City, Iowa; Douglas Tool, of Atlanta, Nebraska, where he is superintendent of schools, and Junior Tool, who is a student at the University of Nebraska, at Lincoln.

chain lay on the ground. The door of the truck caught Mr. Ganaway and hurled him to the ground, his wrist being quite severely sprained from the impact.

Juniors Take a Trip Eighteen of the Junior class of the Murdock high school were in Omaha last Thursday, where they looked over the town under the guidance of their principal, Elbert Mason Miller.

Many Attend Funeral A number of the people of Murdock were in Weeping Water last Tuesday, going to attend the funeral of the late Fred H. Gorder, long time county commissioner. Among those from here attending were A. J. Tool and wife, Mrs. Hannah McDonald, Turner McKinnon and wife and H. W. Tool, who was visiting here.

Discontinues Milk Business After having maintained a fine dairy herd from which he sold milk to customers in Murdock for the past fifteen years, W. T. Weddell has disposed of them and discontinued the milk business.

Exchange Residences Last Week Carl Buck has been making his home in a property formerly owned by A. H. Ward, which he has sold to Merle Gillespie, moved into the place Mr. Gillespie has heretofore occupied at the same time Mr. Gillespie and family were moving into their home vacated by Mr. Buck.

Mr. Gillespie expects to make a number of changes in the property, all of which work he will be able to carry on while living in it.

Was in Hospital for Time Mrs. Glen Harger was visiting with her folks up state for a time, and while there about a month ago was taken ill and had to go to the hospital, where she underwent treatment for a time. As she is now restored to health, Glen went and brought the wife home last Sunday. Mrs. Harger is getting along nicely since her return home.

Returning to Murdock to Live Mrs. Caroline Backemeyer, who has been making her home with relatives in Greenwood during the winter is having her home repaired, the exterior repainted and the interior decorated, and is moving back to Murdock for the summer.

Rebuilding Residence Property The property formerly owned by Henry Jacobson, which is now owned by the H. O. L. C. is being repaired and modernized. Water has been installed, the work being done by James Crawford. The government inspector was here last week and viewed the work already completed, passing favorably on it. The other work is going forward rapidly.

Impressive Easter Service A University student's observance of a Holy Week and an Easter service at the Callahan church. The Gospel of Jesus is still the salvation for souls: The Holy week services were uplifting and inspiring to the large number that attended. Many souls made their decision for Christ. Easter Sunday was the climax. Extreme quiet and peace seemed to abound within the four walls of a beautiful country church when 199 people entered in a most beautiful and impressive service. Four children received the Holy rite of Baptism and twelve were received into the church Communion. The flowers brought by friends made a beautiful setting for the entire service.

The Pastor brought a very encouraging sermon on the theme "With Christ at the Open Grave."

Many Enjoyed Class Play The Senior class of the Murdock Murdock high school presented their play, "Listen to Learn" at the auditorium of the high school on Friday evening of last week. The class has been practicing for some time and as a result were able to give a very fine presentation. The play was filled with excitement, pathos and merriment, which gave the audience much to laugh at and as well something to think about. There was a large attendance and all enjoyed the show. The cast was composed of the following young people:

Archibald Darby, a friend of Leon's, Marvin Webster.
Anna Cushman, Carolyn's friend, Irene Gorthey.

Carolyn Jamison, Colonel Bryan's ward, Maxine Miller.
Leon Bryan, himself, Reuben Stock.

Giuseppe, His Man, Lyle Stock.
Colonel Bryan, Leon's uncle, John Gakemeier.

Babe, Leon's step-daughter, Marion Barden.
Nellie, Babe's maid, Sarah McCrory.

Present Religious Play Last Sunday night the young people of the Murdock Circle presented "He is the Son of God," by Lenivard Taft, to a large and appreciative audience, to give the Easter emphasis in the community at the close of the day. The cast worked faithfully under the direction of the Circle sponsor, Mrs. Leo Rikli, and chairman, Willard Rosenow.

Observed Good Friday Good Friday services for the community were held in the Murdock church at 10:00 a. m., with an inspiring and worshipful audience numbering 243. The Rev. W. G. Rembolt, pastor of the First Evangelical church at Lincoln was the guest speaker. Special music was furnished by a Callahan duet, a mixed quartette and the combined choirs of the Murdock and Louisville churches.

The school being closed for the entire day, gave all in attendance an opportunity to worship as families and to have the meaning of the day rise to new importance and helpfulness.

A large attendance was witnessed at Trinity Lutheran church north of Murdock, where the worshippers partook of Holy Communion and honored the crucifixion of Our Lord.
