WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1898.

The republican party is more anxious for the welfare of the bondholder than for any other class of people. It is the bond holders' party.

An imp of darkness at the writer's elbow suggests that the recent editorial in the Post about "Little Things" had personal reference to the editor of that publication, but the insinuation is rejected with the scorn it deserves.

The Journal hears that numerous friends of Matt Spader of Wabash are urging him to stand for the nomination for commissioner in that district. Mr. Spader is a German-American of excellent character and rare good sense who would make a careful and conscientious official.

The fact that Col. Bryan was tendered an ovation at every stopping place while enroute to Jacksonville is looked upon by the plutocratic press as highly improper. His popularity with the people excites both their envy and wrath, but in this case it is impotent. He is still the popular idol.

Under Lincoln the republican party was the party of the people. Of late years it has steadily degenerated, and now it is the avowed champion of the bond-holders and money-changers. Like the Jewish temple in the time of Christ, "it has made the Lord's house the house of merchandise."

The republicans of the Third commissioner district struggled through forty-three ballots in the efforts to secure a successor to the present commissioner, and at last hit upon Turner Zink, a pronounced prohibitionist, as their candidate--which pretty nearly assures the election of the fusion nominee. Mr. Hayes was dropped like a hot potato because he was true to a friend, and Mr. Zink will learn further on that that is no mean thing to possess.

It is observed that this administration is going ahead in hot haste with the issue of bonds, in order to get them out before it completes its peace negotiations, and it is so anxious to serve its friends, the bankers, that it has issued a circular assuring them that those who have offered to take large amounts shall be supplied first, and those who offered to take small amounts must wait till the big bidders are supplied. Truly this a patriotic administration.

Among the names spoken of for commissioner in the Third district, is that of P. J. Conner, a prominent farmer of Tipton precinct. Of Mr. Conner THE JOURNAL hears very flattering reports. He has not been in politics heretofore, but is a man highly respected by his neighbors. He has youth, vigor, energy and industry to commend him, and if he is the nominee he will be likely to give his opponent such a race as will Zink him into obcurity.

The republicans on Saturday made two very decent nominations for the house. Not much can be said to their disparagement personally. Mr. Pollard is a bright young man who made quite a good record for himself in the last house. He is badly afflicted with what the Germans would call gewollen Kopf, but that is his greatest weakness. Mr. Young is a farmer of character, but is not over-supplied with brains or general information. He affects great morality, is a bitter partisan and could be depended upon to vote as the party bosses dictate in every case. It is unfortunate for these men to be handicapped by a member of the late Mosher gang.

The avidity with which a republican congress agreed to saddle an interest debt of $20,000,000 upon people to pay in the next thirty years, was astonishing--in view of the probable shortness of the Spanish war but that alacrity in authorizing the bond issue of $400,000,000 is more than equalled by the celerity now used in getting a big hunk of the bonds out before the war closes.

Under Lincoln an income tax was a proper war measure. Under McKinley the rich are too good to be compelled to pay their part of the cost of the war. The banks and other big corporations evade the war revenue tax, while the people have to pay the whole bill. Such is the power of plutocracy over modern republicanism. Haven't the people had their fill of such an incubus?

A SAILOR BOY'S LETTER.

A Plattsmouth Boy on the U. S. S. Columbia Writes Home to Mother.

The following letter has been received from John McCarthy, a Plattsmouth boy, who is serving in the navy aboard the U. S. S. Columbia. He is a brother of Jos. McCarthy and a son of Mrs. Mary McCarthy, to whom the letter was addressed:

GUANTANAMO, CUBA, July 17.

DEAR MOTHER:

This morning we arrived in this harbor and a very pretty place it is. The only draw back to its beauty is the fact that it is a veritable fever hole. Three ships lying close to us are flying the yellow flag. There are about twenty men-of-war and transports here and some ten or twelve colliers making a very considerable fleet and if fever gets a foothold in the ships it will do more damage than the Spaniards can do with guns. Sitting here in the gun sponser where I am writing I can see Fort McCalla, the first place taken by our marines and the American flag planted. Just below is a camp of Cubans with the Cuban flag floating in the breeze and all around the harbor, except the entrance, is girt with high, rugged hills.

One would think that this was a healthy climate to look at, but it is the deadly heat one day and the fierce rains that makes it so sickly. I think we will cool here and then make tracks for Porto Rico, probably the city of San Juan and occupy it. If we do we will be certainly in luck, for that is a fine climate. To tell the truth about it, I would rather go under if I have to than go by the fever route. We have had little or no sickness aboard as yet. There must have been some terrible suffering from hunger in Santiago before it surrendered, for they had nothing but dry hard tack and water for a month before they gave in. Two days before a whole regiment of cavalry came up to the American lines and threw down their arms and begged the Americans to give them something to eat.

We just came from Santiago where we landed troops on the 11th from Massachusetts, Illinois and Wisconsin. They were a fine body of men. The morning we arrived there I was somewhat thrilled for on all sides were evidences of war. Battleships with their 13-inch guns frowning from out their turrets, the veritable dogs of war; then the cruisers, then the sm aller but plucky gunboats. They could have shelled the city without the Spaniards being able to train their guns on us, for the coast line is like the sketch. (Here is given a drawing of Santiago harbor.)--Ed.

There was a man stationed on a mountain above the city where he could signal whether our shells fell short or not. He used a heliograph to signal with. We could not see the city for there was a high hill between it and us.

On the 14th the news was signaled from the shore that Santiago had surrendered. I could not see any reason at the time for their surrendering in view of the fact that they had two men to our one and a commanding position at the entrance to the harbor. The forts would throw every once in a while what appeared like pile driver hammers, which would screech like a cage of parrots.

It does not rain there. The bottom merely drops out of the sky. You would imagine if you were in a rain here that a thousand people were playing on you with a garden hose. As for thunder and lightning I would say that nervous people should give this place a wide berth.

Well, mother, I will tire you no longer with this letter and will close hoping all are so good as to inquire about me will write to me, I remain, with love to all, your son,
JOHN E. MCCARTHY.

Take THE JOURNAL.

THE NEW WAY.

WOMEN used to think "female diseases" could only be treated after "flow" examinations by physicians. Dread of such treatment kept thousands of modest women silent about their suffering. The introduction of Wine of Cardui has now demonstrated that nine-tenths of all the cases of menstrual disorders do not require a physician's attention at all. The simple, pure taken in the privacy of a woman's own home insures quick relief and speedy cure. Women need not hesitate now. Wine of Cardui requires no humiliating examinations for its adoption. It cures any disease that comes under the head of "female troubles"--disordered menses, falling of the womb, "whites," change of life. It makes women beautiful by making them well. It keeps them young by keeping them healthy. $1.00 at the drug store.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, the "Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

W. I. ADDISON, M.D., Cary, Ill., says: "I use Wine of Cardui extensively in my practice and find it most excellent preparation for female troubles."
