"I have had numerous complaints of late that these machines take your money under false pretenses, in that they do not record the correct weight," says Colonel Pegg. "A man came to me this morning and said he had lost a large bet by the untruthfulness of one machine and that he had notified the stakeholder to keep the money until the weighing machine had been tested. This same man said that after losing his bet he started out testing weighing machines on his own hook and after putting ten pennies in as many different machines found they were a delusion and a snare, in that no two machines tipped his weight off at the same figure." Mr. Pegg says his office force is inadequate to check all the various complaints that are made to him. His allowance for extra help is only $50 a month, but he is going to insist on having an assistant to look after the smaller matters pertaining to the office, as he expects that after that date his time will be entirely occupied chasing bigger fish. It is said some official notice may arrive Friday which will make it for the local union to act and suspend the strike for a time, but the few holding out staunchly maintain the strike has not been settled. Operators in Omaha cannot go back to their keys until the local organization decides to suspend the strike. It is said here are now employed in railroad work or at their old places. She writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of the very worst form of female trouble and I wish to express to you my deepest gratitude. I suffered intensely for two years so that I was unable to attend to my duties and was a burden to my family. I doctored and doctored with only temporary relief and constantly objecting to an operation which I was advised to undergo. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it cured me of the terrible trouble and I am now in better health than I have been for many years." This and other such cases should encourage every woman to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before she submits to an operation. WILL OF COUNT SETTLED Terms Are Fully Agreed On and Law Suits by Heirs Are Averted. The will of the late Count John A. Creighton has been settled. This was admitted by attorneys for the several factions Thursday. Since the filing of the will disposing of the large estate left by the philanthropist there has been much talk and counter-talk of contests. The bulk of the estate was bequeathed to charitable and educational institutions of the Catholic church and the relatives were dissatisfied with the shares which fell to them. As soon as the threatened contests materialized steps were taken to arbitrate, with the result now brought about. The attorneys refuse to say anything regarding the terms of the settlement, but it is a liberal compromise between the institutions to which Count Creighton left most of his wealth and the relatives. The papers will be filed. It is said, in court within a few days.

Strange what a little thing will upset a man and keep him all day, when he ought to be alert and cheerful. A heavy, hot biscuit for breakfast has been known to create a scrap between life-long friends. If you want a peaceful day at a dish of Grape-Nuts [chew it slowly] and cream. The deliberate chewing of the crisp, nutty granules, which have a delicious flavor with cream, will not only put you right, but give you strength of mind and body for the morning's work at the office. Try it. "There's a Reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs.

WEIGHING MACHINES LIARS They Do Not Truthfully Settle Beta About Man's Weight, Says John Pegg. City Inspector of Weights and Measures John G. Pegg has decided to go after the nickel-in-the-slot weighing machines in the different hotels and other places in the city and see that they are kept properly adjusted to record the correct weight of those who patronize them. "I have had numerous complaints of late that these machines take your money under false pretenses, in that they do not record the correct weight," says Colonel Pegg. "A man came to me this morning and said he had lost a large bet by the untruthfulness of one machine and that he had notified the stakeholder to keep the money until the weighing machine had been tested. This same man said that after losing his bet he started out testing weighing machines on his own hook and after putting ten pennies in as many different machines found they were a delusion and a snare, in that no two machines tipped his weight off at the same figure." Mr. Pegg says his office force is inadequate to check all the various complaints that are made to him. His allowance for extra help is only $50 a month, but he is going to insist on having an assistant to look after the smaller matters pertaining to the office, as he expects that after that date his time will be entirely occupied chasing bigger fish. Put a Want Ad in The Bee telling your qualifications and you'll soon be busy again. You are just the person some employer wants and you'll find that employer if you take the right course. CROOK STRIPS A DUMMY Partner Occupies Merchant Inside While Coat is Taken from Street Sign. Mr. Memo, who owns a dry goods store at 23 North Sixteenth street reports to the police that he was twice swindled by two ordinary individuals who used the most ordinary methods. But the methods employed accomplished the desired end. Mr. Memo keeps two canvas sheep skin lined coats to warm the backs of two dummy men in front of his store. The two live men who came along contrived to rob the dummies. They not only contrived, but did actually rob and strip them of their apparel in the following manner: Live man No. 1 went inside the store and led the proprietor to the remotest corner in the back of the store on the pretense of wanting to buy something he saw upon a high shelf. In the meantime, the live man No. 2 stood out in front, entering the dummy, and at the proper time he accomplished his mission and hopped on a passing street car.
