FACT FILED AND WITHDRAWN

Compromise Agreement in Creighton Will Recorded, but Promptly Taken Away by Attorney. Though a stipulation containing the compromise agreement among the County Creighton heirs has been filed in county court, it has been withdrawn from the files and the utmost secrecy is being maintained by those interested as to the contents of the document or the basis of the agreement. The officials in the county court who saw the agreement have been pledged to secrecy and none of the attorneys interested would discuss the matter. The only reason given for the withdrawal of the files was that the attorneys wanted to draw up a decree which will be submitted to the court Monday. After this is done the terms of the agreement will be made known. No other reason was given for the suppression of the files except that those interested did not want the terms of the agreement made known until the decree had been signed by the court.

WESTON MAKES GOOD REPORT

President of Hay Springs Bank Says Farmers Are Content and Cash Conserved. Charles Weston of Hay Springs, Neb., formerly state auditor and now president of the First National bank of Hay Springs, is at the Millard hotel. "We are conserving our cash as much as possible in the western part of the state as the bankers are doing everywhere else," he said. "But the farmers have not lost any confidence so far we can see. Of course, in a small town the people get closer to the banker than they do in the cities. They know the president and directors personally and probably call them by their first names. This accounts, in a measure, for the confidence. Perhaps when the money flurry started they went to the president and said, 'Bill, is your bank all right?' And when Bill assured them it was they were satisfied. "We had an immense crop of potatoes. Five hundred car loads were shipped out of our county this fall at prices averaging 50 cents a bushel. Other crops were also of the variety."

WOLFE WANTS AN ASSISTANT

Inspector of Boilers Cannot Possibly Do All the Work Alone, He Says. Robert U. Wolfe, inspector of boilers has adopted a novel plan of impressing upon the council the necessity for the appointment of an assistant in his office. His first application was refused at the last session of the council and he has prepared another communication to that body, setting forth the reasons why he should have help. He says that at this season there is more work than two men can do, and that because so many houses are starting their steam heating plants for the winter and he is supposed to inspect all boilers not reported to him before fires are started. This is a practical impossibility according to his statement and he announced his intention of sending a letter to the council each week setting out the same facts until some action is taken. "At this time," he says, "I am in the position of a man standing on a powder magazine. The powder may not explode, but if it does there will be little hope of saving the man, to see of these boilers explodes I will be accused of not doing my duty. I am busy all the time, but I am all of the boilers and I am not responsible. I want the council to understand this so the public will know where to place the blame if there are any casualties."
