TRIBUTE TO OLD SANTA CLAUS

Belief in Him is the Anchor Which Holds the Child to

We have occasionally heard of certain enthusiasts, to give them a dignified title, who desired to disillusionize the modern mind of that pretty myth of Santa Claus. They were fond of taking as their motto, "Call a spade a spade," and named themselves "reformers." Adopting the same motto, it has always seemed to us that their orthography was at fault, and that they had got one letter wrong. There name should be "deformers." It has even been rumored that the advisability of relegating the old reindeer driver to the region of the werewolves and headless horsemen has formed the subject of discussion in certain learned coteries. The School Journal, indeed, has thought the matter so serious as to give it an editorial which most assuredly is worth the consideration of all who would make the child mind as matter-offact as their own. Are their teachers of little children so lacking in the finer sensibillities and so void of ordinary tact that they will deliberately set out to destroy a poetic fancy which is the joy of youthful hearts? It seems incredible. Yet there must be some. For each year brings reports of cases where unhumaned-they must be that-teachers have upset their pupils by telling them that there is no Santa Claus; that the stories about him are not true; that the presents received on Christmas day are gifts provided by parents and friends. The usual result is that the children are greatly stirred up, and the parents become very indignant at what they regard as unpardonable "cruelty" on

Are not tea realities? Do not we fall to grasp a splendid opportunity, if we omit to teach the children to regard the Christmas presents as tokens of the affection of their parents, and to give thanks to whom this is due? Is it right, instead of doing this, to leave the children in their belief of Santa Claus?

The belief in Santa Claus may be the answer of the continue throughout the entire year of 1908.

TRAVELING MEN ARE CONFIDENT

Underlying Conditions Are Good and Those in Close Touch with Sitnation Say 1908 Will Break Records.

With a break in the middle of the week and invoicing in many of the wholesals houses well under way the week has been almost without feature. Traveling men have been gathering in Omaha for the holidays and all the orders filled during the week were those previously taken or small mail orders. Solling has been at a standstill and prices are about as interesting. on Confidence in the trade and in the finan-

Confidence in the trade and in the financial outlook and confidence in the business possibilities of 1908 has been the keynote of all the good things spoken by the traveling men and wholesalers during the week. Several houses have held dinners for their salesmen and the situation has been discussed by men in close touch with the situation. All of the speakers have said they took the cheerful view. Things looked good to them for 1908. Clearance Sales Next.

Probably the next thing of interest in Omaha trade will be the clearance sales in the jobbing houses. A number of buyers are likely to visit the city within the next week or two. Many lines suitable for January sales will be sold by Omaha houses at a bargain and enable the retailers to take advantage of the prices made in at a bargain and enable the retailers to take advantage of the prices made in Omaha to put on big sales of piece goods.

Before Christmas was over retailers had their windows full of white goods and began selling when the stores opened on December 26. It is noticeable that with the opening of the sales there is strong talk of advance in lines. The change is not expected for thirty days. Back orders are being shipped and some orders have been placed for January sales. The linen market has been quiet, but the next two weeks may see something doing. Merchants have been very conservative in placing their orders. The financial flurry made them very continue, but now that the trouble is pracorders. The financial flurry made them very cautious, but now that the trouble is practically over it is expected that business will show a big increase. It is reported that after the first of the year damasks will be advanced 10 per cent. Some wholesslers are of the opinion that this thread is made for the purpose of inducing buginess and comes entirely from the Buropean manufacturers.

manufacturers. While the market across the water still while the market across the water suit shows strength, there is no doubt that they feel the need of orders," said a wholesaler, "I believe they will be forced to offer their stocks at still lower figures, but even it they do make a reduction it will be very slight. This is a good time to buy linens, as far as we can see from Omaha. The sup-ply of flax is pientiful and of good quality. This means an additional profit for the spinners."

Print Cloth is Quiet.

Many eastern manufacturers and jobbers continue to announce that prices on various lines will hold steady and not move a point neither up nor down. Buyers are in the market for immediate wants only.

The trend of the dress goods market is interesting. Veilings are having a remarkable sale for spring. The material is now considered staple. They will be employed to a large extent next year for separate skirts to be worn with white lingerie walsts, A marked general improvement is noted in the dress goods market. Traveling salesmen who are on the road claim that they are receiving equally as large orders as they did last year at this time and that retailers are enjoying a good trade in this department.

retailers are enjoying a good trade in this department.

It is true that some merchants are a little cautious in placing their spring orders, but the majority of merchants, especially those merchants so located that they can order goods from stock at any time, are now placing orders to cover their early spring wants. This is a good indication.

A steady gain is noted in serges. While, storm serges are selling, surah serges are in equally good demand. Some garment manufacturers predict that blue serges ard likely to be scarce during June and July.

Self-colored stripes, made by different weaves, lead in favor. Herringbone stripes are also having a good call.

are also having a good call.

Drugs at a Standstill.

Extremely quiet conditions have been noted during the week with the druggists, as interest has been centered in affairs incident to the midwinter holidays. Selling consists in the necessities of the winter season, such as materials for lotions and cough and cold cures. Summing up the actual condition, a druggist says:

"Oplum shows no improvement in demand and continued duliness prevalis throughout the market, notwithstanding the recent reductions in the open quotation to 35. Powdered is not receiving much attention, but dealers are not disposed to quote less than 80.0026, 10, as to quantity and seller.

"Quinine is unchanged and the market remains dull and featureless, with manufacturers quoting on the old basis of 16c for bulk in 160-ounce tins.

"Lithia carbonate is still more or less unsettled under the influences heretofore noted. Spot quotations have been reduced to 50655c and sales are reported at the inside figure, while export orders are said to have been filled at even less.

"American saffron is exceedingly dull in the absence of demand and the quotation is entirely nominal at 30c.

"German fennel seed is firmer in sympathy with corresponding conditions abroad and spot quotations have been advanced to 9610c, as to quality, with sales reported of prime quality at the higher figure.

"Belladonna leaves are in good demand and firmer, with the stock of strictly prime U. S. P. almost exhausted, The revised quotations are 14617c and for good answering the U. S. P. test up to 16c is reported paid.

"Grindelia robusta is decidedly dull and long with quotations reduced to 54626c.

the adult be robbed even of this one remnant of reminiscence of how it feels to be perfectly happy? Then leave to Christmas the halo of glory and mystery; leave to the halo of glory and mystery; leave to the "Acetone remains dull in the absence of demand and the market continues somewhat unsettled, but quotations are unchanged at the recent decline to 164@18c, as to quantity."

The Grocery Market. The Grocery Market.

Few advances have been noted by the grocers during the week. Hominy has advanced 60 cents per barrel, sweet potatoes from 25 to 50 cents per barrel, some varieties of choese I cent per pound, dried green peas 10 cents per bushel, fancy navy beans 25 cents per bushel, fancy navy beans 25 cents per bushel, Among the declines noted sauerkraut took a fall of almost 33 per barrel, while the "Twin" chesse declined I cent per pound.

Reports to the grocers indicate that prime olives throughout the country are limited and indications are that shipments of olives now on the way to this country will be tapidly absorbed by the demand. Some believe that conditions are such that prices be rapidly absorbed by the demand. Some believe that conditions are such that prices will be maintained, despite the prediction that all grocers have not been receiving many cancellations of orders given early, though there is a general tendency to cut down orders in many markets. The following is a clipping from an eastern paper, which shows the tomper of importing concerns as to cancellations: "Buyers who have sought to cancel contracts because of the change in business condition since the time their orders were placed seem to have put themselves into an uncuriable position. A prominent importing house issued the following yesterday: "As we are yet annoyed occasionally by some out-of-town parties wishing to cancel sales for no reason whatever, further than that it does not suit their interest to take the goods, we must here state, and wish to goods, we must here state, and wish to have it distinctly understood, that we will not seil in future to any concern who unjustly goes back on their contract. We prefer to lose a customer rather than deal with people who will not abide by the rules of trade."

Nothing Cruel About Her. Freddy's mother had taught him to al-vays be considerate of animals. One day Freddy came running in from play, crying out to his mamma excitedly: Mamma, I know you'll like the little girl what has moved in next door, for she's very kind to animals." "Well, son, I'm giad to hear such good account of the new neighbor's little demonstrated to you her kindness to animala?" "Why, we-she and I-found some nuts on the ground and were cracking them to eat when she found a worm in one of them. And she was so consider-
