BUCKINGHAM NAMES FORCE

New General Manager of Stock Yards Makes No Material Change in Subordinates.

Everett Buckingham, general manager of the Union Stock Yards company, announced the selection of his working staff Tuesday morning. True to his earliest statement, he made no changes in the force. All are retained, with the exception of J. L. Paxton, who had resigned as general superintendent. This office was left out entirely, the work being assumed by Mr. Buckingham and Mr. Walters, who was retained as general yardmaster. W. Scott King was retained as chief engineer, in accord with Mr. Buckingham's former announcement. This announcement will be received with considerable satisfaction in all circles about the yards. Mr. King had tendered his resignation some time ago. He resigned his position that he might engage in the enterprises of the National Construction company, which at present is busily engaged in the construction of the Mud Creek sewer. His resignation was not accepted by the company, but it was agreed that he could give part of his time to the office at the yards and have what time he needed to oversee the affairs of the National Construction company. On this condition he decided to continue in the service of the Union Stock Yards company. The appointments are as follows: Switching Department—J. H. Brady, superintendent; Theodore Thomas, car accountant; F. G. Cokerell, foreman of engines; John Sund, foreman of track. Stock Yards Department—John S. Walters, general yardmaster; Robert Hall, foreman of yard repair; John Oller, foreman of horse and mule barn; J. A. Thurlow, foreman of sheep barn; Percy Ambler, feedmaster; W. E. Farber, chief of fire and police departments; P. S. Moore, storekeeper; W. S. King, chief engineer. The company is working on a strictly economical basis this year and for this reason a few employees have been dispensed with.

BROWN TELLS OF THAT VISIT

Gives His Version in Reply to Mayor Jim on Washington Interview.

Elmer E. Brown, who was with Mayor Dahlman on the occasion of his visit to the president in Washington recently, has just returned to Omaha, and today dictated this statement regarding the facts in the famous interview:

"I was in Washington at the time of the meeting of the national democratic committee, and while there I visited the Arlington hotel, where I met Mayor Dahlman. He introduced me to a number of prominent democrats and seemed to be on as friendly relations with me as have existed for the last three years. "On Friday morning I called at the Arlington, where I met James J. Hill, and while talking to him Mr. Dahlman came up and I introduced him and another man to Mr. Hill. "In a little while I met Mr. Dahlman again in the rotunda and he said: 'Let us go over and see the president,' and without any further conversation we started out. We waited a few moments in the reception room and then were both ushered in and met the president. "The president talked a few moments, possibly five minutes. After Mr. Dahlman and I left we visited other parts of the White House, and from there went to my room, after first visiting the bar, at the Willard hotel. We sat in my room fifteen minutes talking over political matters, when we decided to visit a place known as Shoemaker's, a saloon near the Times office. While at Shoemaker's I suggested that we call on a friend of mine, a newspaper man. We proceeded to the Times editorial room, where I introduced Mr. Dahlman to my newspaper friends. "Mr. Dahlman and I mentioned the matter of visiting the president, not even thinking it was of great importance, as other people were in the room when Mr. Roosevelt talked to us, and this conversation with the newspaper men is sure the famous story regarding the president's attitude on the panic originated. When we gave the reporter an extract of what the president said the reporter wrote it up in long hand, afterward reading it to us and asking if it was correct. Mr. Dahlman and I both agreed that it was substantially correct. The photographer took a snapshot of the mayor while at the office and we left and were together considerably during the day. "Mr. Dahlman left the following day for Omaha and I left for New York on Sunday afternoon. Someone in Washington had notified the New York World that I was to arrive at the Park Avenue hotel, and upon my arrival a reporter was there to meet me and he informed me for the first time that someone at the White House had repudiated the interview with the president as given out by Mayor Dahlman and myself. I told the reporter that the interview was substantially correct, also that as there were others in the room as the president was talking to us, we did not consider it a breach of confidence in giving it out. I wired Mayor Dahlman at Omaha that the interview was repudiated and that I would protect him in an interview in the World, which I did."

MONTH BIG FOR BUILDING

December Shows Gain of Twenty-Seven Per Cent Over Same Month Last Year.

Building in Omaha has continued to move during the month of December just closed and shows a substantial gain over the corresponding month last year. The report of the building inspector for December shows a gain of 27 per cent. The largest permit issued was for the warehouse of the Paxton & Gallagher company at Ninth and Jones streets for $100,000. Here are Inspector Withnell's figures: 1907, December, 66 permits, $79,776,000; December, 62 permits, $120,000,000; Increase, about 27 per cent..... $ 60,000

FUNERAL OF REV. W. M. ROUZEE

Burial of New York Evangelist, Who Dies at Schuyler, Will Be in Omaha.

Funeral services of Rev. William M. Rouzee, the New York evangelist who died at Schuyler Sunday morning, will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the home of his brother, S. L. Rouzee, foreman of the stereotyping room of the Bee, 1302 Ohio street, the body having been brought to Omaha. Mr. Rouzee was 54 years of age and was on an evangelistic tour of the west with his wife and daughter, when he passed away after a brief illness at Schuyler. His home was in New York, where he had been connected with the great summer campaigns of the evangelistic committee of New York City. The evangelist was born in Washington, D. C., and went to New York to study art in the Academy of Design. After finishing his study in New York he conducted an art school in Washington for a number of years and afterward studied in France for two years. Ten years ago he was led to take up evangelistic work because of his great power of appealing to men and women.

LIBRARY BOOKS IN SCHOOLS

Nearly Seven Thousand Volumes in Branches for Pupils.

DEMAND FOR THEM ENORMOUS

Each Book Goes Out Once a Week, Giving Total Circulation for the School Year of 216,320.

A great campaign of education combined pleasantly with entertainment is going on in Omaha. It is a campaign little known, but one which is bringing untold amounts of pleasure and profit to the hearts of thousands of children and their parents. The agent of this work is the city library and the medium through which much of it is being done is the public school and the public school children. Eighteen of the school buildings of the city a branch library is maintained by the city library with an average of fifty books to each grade. The total number of books in these branches is 6,700. The 6,700 books circulated among the school children and their families by this method are of these classes: fiction, (standard authors like Scott, Dickens, Dumas, 314; juvenile fiction, 1,870; poetry and drama, 228; essays and miscellaneous, 40; ancient classics, 21; biology, 216; history, 534; travels, 44; natural history, 208; natural science, 76 useful arts, 196; fine arts, 42; medicine and hygiene, 4; ethics, 2; language and education, 62; political and social science, 14; religion and theology, 103; periodicals, 23.

Nothing "trashy" is allowed to creep upon the shelves of these branches. Thus the tastes of the children are moulded along the highest lines. And yet the books are such that they are easily understood by the children. Many of them are classics told in simple language.

Demand is Enormous. The demand for the books is enormous. It is estimated that each volume goes out once a week at least. This means a circulation of 27,000 books from the school libraries each month. In the eight months of the school year 216,320 volumes are taken out.

The readers are by no means restricted to the children. Especially is this true among the poorer class of people or those who were compelled to leave the school early in their childhood to earn their livelihood, and to whom the delights of literature were denied. Many touching stories come from the schools indicating the thirst of these people for literature which is classic. In many a humble home the evening is spent in reading aloud and it seems that this ancient art is being revived by reason of twentieth century editions. The father worn out with his day's toil, the mother weary with her burdens, sisters and brothers and others sit about in the evening while the young son or daughter who is getting the advantages of which the others have been denied reads aloud an interesting story from Dickens or Dumas or unfolds the beauties of the legends of King Arthur or the wonders of the Greek myths or the absorbing plots of Shakespeare's plays.

Most Advantageous System. "It is by far the most advantageous system we have yet devised," said Miss Edith Tobitt, city librarian. "We tried the branch library plan and the plan of having branches in some of the drug stores. But in each case the central library was sapped of some of its strength in the growth of the branches. The plan of having these books circulating from the public school does not take vigor from the central institution, but adds strength to it. Moreover the system costs nothing and the good accomplished is evidently the maximum amount possible."

The report of the city library for 1907 shows an increase of 2,000 in the book circulation. The greater part of this is in the school branches which have leaped forward in popularity.

But there are other directions in which the city library circulation has expanded. One of these is in the medical department. The library now has a large number of medical books. Another is the branch established recently at the Union Pacific shops. The night school there is attended by ninety men and boys. The books in the shop branch are selected especially for these students and bear on mechanical subjects.

Factory Branch Popular. A branch has also been established in one of the factories of the city and more factory branches will be started. The extension secretary of the Young Women's Christian association is co-operating with the library in this work and will provide for the maintenance of branches for factory girls.

Miss Tobitt has stimulated the interest in the library in various ways. One is a class which she has organized for teachers in which instruction is given how to use the books of the library and systematic readings are outlined for adults and for children. Another was a series of stereopticon lectures entitled "Life in Many Lands." These were begun last fall and were given each afternoon and twice on Saturday. They were for seventh and eight grade children.

WE thank our patrons each and every one for their part in making the past year the best we have had. We wish them all
