

HARVARD MAN SLAPS WEST

Deane Greene Says it Likes to Display Its Diplomas. BOSTON WOULD NEVER DO IT He Holds in Suit Here that Diploma Has Only Sentimental Value—President Elliot Also Testifies.

Charles M. Greene, dean of the Medical School of Harvard University, takes a fling at the west in an invective comparison between it and Boston in a deposition he makes as testimony on the valuation of a diploma in a case in the United States circuit court in Omaha. Mr. Greene says:

The diploma itself has a sentimental value to the possessor. The real value to the possessor is that which the diploma testifies to. It is the evidence. There are other evidences of course. The fact that the possessor has a degree is of great value. The value of the diploma as certifying to it is probably a sentimental one. It is making that reply I will state that some men do not like to display them in their offices. In the west they do; but in this part of the world (Boston) a man of any prominence would be ashamed to display his diploma in his office and would consider it poor taste.

The deposition was called out through the suit brought by Dr. George H. Whiteside of Omaha, a graduate of the Harvard Medical School of 1882, who entrusted his diploma to the Adams Express Company for delivery, and the diploma was lost by the express company. Dr. Whiteside brought suit against the express company for $20,000 damages in September, 1907, after he had been informed by the Harvard University authorities that a duplicate or even certified copy of the diploma could not be furnished by the university. The university people informed him they could furnish a certificate that such a diploma had been issued to Dr. Whiteside. In his petition for damages against the express company Dr. Whiteside alleged he would be barred from the practice of his profession in at least twenty states of the union by the absence of such diploma.

The Adams Express company in its reply held that a diploma had no value, and in order to substantiate this claim depositions were taken in the case of President Charles W. Elliot, Jerome D. Greene, Dr. Charles M. Greene and Winthrop H. Wade of the university faculty. These depositions have just been filed in the circuit court for the Nebraska federal district. All of the depositions ascribe to the diploma merely a sentimental value. None of the other depositions, however, take so extreme a position as does that of Dr. C. M. Greene.

The case is still pending in the United States circuit court in the matter of damages brought by Dr. Whiteside. They Cure Colds in One Day. Red Cross Cough Drops, 5c per box. TIME PUT ON CASH BASIS Grain Man Asks Three Hundred Dollars for Half Hour Delay of Telegram.

A delay of half an hour in the delivery of a message may cost the Postal Telegraph company $200, it is claimed by John E. Von Dorn made in a petition filed Friday in district court, is sustained. Von Dorn says September 30, J. H. Kessenbrock of Columbus telegraphed him to sell $50,000 worth of wheat for December delivery on the Chicago Board of Trade when it opened at 9:30. He says the message did not reach him until after 10 o'clock, though it could have been delivered in time to enable him to carry out the order. December wheat went down a cent, resulting in the loss to his client. Kessenbrock has assigned his claim for damages to the plaintiff.

From the store of Walter Arant, 284 Leavenworth street, a thief took a dozen pairs of kid gloves. Don B. When he was through the work, the coat was gone. Detective Mitchell found it in a pawn shop Friday.
