Temperature.

OMAHA, Feb. 15, 1908.

The storm center noted over Oklahoma and the lower Missouri valley Friday morning moved northeastward with increasing energy and is central over the upper Ohio valley and lower lakes this morning. This disturbance was followed by high winds throughout the southwest, central valleys and lower Ohio valley and caused heavy rains in the middle Mississippi and Ohio valleys, and is accompanied by rains and snows in the lake region and eastern states this morning. A decided drop in temperature followed the storm in the central valleys and southern states. The weather is warmer in the upper Missouri valley and throughout the west. The weather will be fair in this vicinity tonight and Sunday, with not much change in temperature.
