The Unvarnished Truth About Piano Bargains

FROM the very fact that few people purchase a piano more than once in a life time and the essential parts of a piano are more or less hidden from view, there is not one buyer in ten that can distinguish a genuine bargain from a rank fraud. For these reasons there is probably not another article sold in which the purchaser can be so easily deceived. For example, inferior pianos with gaudy, flashy cases and cheap actions, retailing from $150 to $175, are often marked up to $400 and $500 and then advertised as great bargains at $156 and $179, as the case may be.

The Bennett Company has always shunned any form of misrepresentation and has established a reputation for clean business methods. Our piano sales have doubled during the past year, which is evidence that the public appreciates a piano house in which they can put absolute confidence.

Now, then, after a round to the various piano sales---then what? Come, compare the sale quotations with our regular every-day prices.

A good assortment of pianos similar to the so-called $300 and $350 kinds are here, at our regular price $150 and $175.

Our other well known makes, all with recognized merit and long established reputations for trustworthiness, are:

- Chickering & Sons (Boston)
 - Ivers & Pond
 - Everett
 - Starr
 - Packard
 - Kohler & Campbell
 - Sterling
 - Huntington
 - Chase
 - Harvard
 - Richmond
 - Brinkeroff
- And a number of others.

The Cost

Ten years ago when others were charging $2.50 for cleaning a suit of clothes we put the price to $1.50, and there it has remained.

Although labor and material have advanced 50 to 100 per cent, improved methods and labor saving machinery have enabled us to maintain the same old price.
