PHILATELISTS TO DENVER

Convention of Stamp Collectors to Be Held in Mountain City.

HAVE MILLIONS INVESTED

Great and Small, They Number Thousands and Their Enthusiasm is Unlimited—Several Nebraska Are Prominent.

Westward the army of American philatelists is making its way. Stamp collectors from the four ends of this great old republic are journeying today toward Denver, the philological Mecca of 1907. With bag and baggage, they are bound for the convention city to discuss these matters that are now of most moment to them and to the setpages of which they are devotees.

This year's convention is the twenty-second annual meeting in the history of the organization and it will be significant for several reasons. One of these is that the American association has but recently passed the 1,000 mark in membership. During its two decades of existence it has had several times over this affiliation, but death and other causes which affect the membership of organizations generally have interfered to prevent the maintenance of a total of 1,000 until now.

Another fact that adds interest to this year's gathering of the stamp men and women is that it is the first convention that has been held since stamp collecting was officially decreed a science and stamp collectors scientists. This was through the influence of King Edward of Great Britain, etc., whose edict concerning this matter was generally accepted throughout Christendom as a most wise and just recognition of the real worth and position of philately among the affairs of mankind.

The Royal Philatelic society of London, of which the prince of Wales is president. These fellows include: H. J. Durren, J. M. Anderson, O. F. Bruner, H. Clot, C. B. Corwin, Gordon, Ireland, W. Thorne and J. O. Hobby of New York, G. H. Worthington and C. L. Pack of Cleveland, C. A. Howes of Boston, State Senator E. R. Ackerman of New Jersey, Alexander Holcomb of Chicago, H. J. Crocker of San Francisco, George L. Toppam of Washington, D. C.; W. C. Stone of Springfield, Mass., the present president of the American Philatelic association.

Among the more prominent members of the American Philatelic association residing in Nebraska are: Horace A. Cameron of Omaha, W. F. Hendricks of Omaha, George Marples of Omaha, F. S. Parmelee of Omaha, E. A. Strauss of Omaha, I. T. Bradstone of Superior, H. T. Parker of Williston.

There is a vigorous fight on in the association this year in the election of officers. The battle, while a spirited one, is wholly harmonious, and although the friends of the two tickets are working energetically for their respective favorites, both sides gallantly concede the ability of the opponents, and the winners will sing the praises of the victorious ticket with no greater zest or sincerity than the losers. Albeit it has been an interesting campaign, for the advocates of both tickets have been working for weeks.

Mr. E. Deebelin of Pittsburg is the presidential candidate of one side, while Mr. John N. Luff of New York City is the standard bearer of the other faction. Back of each is an array of earnest followers.

If the Deebelin ticket wins the headquarters of the board of vice presidents, which is a power in the affairs of the association, will remain in Chicago. If the Luff ticket is successful the board will be composed of Bostonians.

The Deebelin-Chicago candidates for this board are Messrs. H. W. Wolsey, F. Michael and C. F. Mann. The Luff-Boston candidates for the board of vice presidents are Messrs. C. A. Howes, L. I. Green and Edward de Z. Kelley. But one candidate's name appears on both tickets, and that is that of Mr. F. R. Cornwall of St. Louis, Mo., who will therefore secure an unanimous vote. The position for which his friends have put him forward is that of membership in the directorate of the association.

BOOK PLATES FOR CHILDREN

New Phase in Teaching the Young Art Student.

ARTIST'S IDEA TAKES DEEP HOLD

Made for the Nurseries of the Rich and for the Public Schools Where the Poor Are Taught.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Book plates for children designed by some clever artist in one of the nurseries find in many playrooms a visitor will find in volumes of "Jungle Stories," or "Little Women," or "Mother Goose," beautifully engraved vellum slips showing some pictures dear to children and proclaiming "William Steuart, 55, His Book," or Gladys Van der Steuben—Her Book."

In artistic quality and in signature these plates are as worthy of merit as those which mark the ownership of the rare books in the family library. But, while the book plates of the older show in complicated allegory or heraldry the tastes or lineage of the adult collectors, the children's book plates are extremely simple. For the little ones scenes from "Mother Goose"—the "Three Blind Mice," or the "Clock With the Mouse Running Up"—or chickens, birds, rabbits, dogs or what not serve as motifs. For little girls dolls or flowers or garden scenes serve, while the boys may have pictures of hunting, fishing, rowing or other sports.

The book plate for children, however, is not intended as a book plate for permanent use. It is prepared merely for use during childhood, until the owner develops individual tastes which will lead him to give his own book plate designed. The book plate, however, is by no means confined to the children of the rich, for the teachers of drawing in the public schools quickly recognized the value of the book plates as lessons in design and drawing. As a result, many children have been taught to fashion their own designs in sufficient number to mark all of their story books and text books.

In fact, in public school 55, in East Fifty-seventh street, a prize was offered to the children for the best design for an artistic book plate to mark all the books in the school. The prize design, the work of a girl only 14 years old, was then blocked and is to be printed and carefully placed in all the books used in the school. Since New York schools have taken this work up art teachers in other cities have introduced it. In fact, in the courses on art and design for teachers' school on University Heights, where teachers from all the large cities are studying, and in the pedagogical courses for art teachers in the

DAY OF HORSE THIEF OVER

South Dakota About Cleared of Tough Gang of Criminals.

CAPTAIN JOHN FOSTER DID TASK

Made a Systematic Effort and Cleaned Up the Territory of Many Vicious Characters.

MITCHELL, S. D., July 27.—(Special.)—Cattle rustling of the Rosebud and Sioux reservations has become pretty nearly an obsolete industry, and it has been dropped for the more profitable industry of rustling horses, which are worth more money than a cow. There is an element out on those reservations which have reached the idea that they are entitled to a living and that the more fortunate settlers have got to furnish it them. The officers have gone after the crowd of rustlers with a determination to put them out of business quicker than the cattle rustlers were extinguished.

Captain John Foster, the government stock inspector for the Rosebud reservation, has taken an active part in going after the horse thieves in the past two or three months and with notable success. The thieves were able to carry on their operations for some time before the inspector got a scent of their work, but once on their trail he has been successful in sending quite a few of them to the penitentiary. Tom Ferron, the acknowledged leader of the gang, was the first who was caught in the inspector's net, and after a trial he was landed in the penitentiary to serve his term. A few weeks later a fellow named Raymond was captured and taken to Deadwood and placed in jail to await his sentence. Following up the capture of Raymond, Captain Foster landed three more of the gang in one haul and they are now safely behind the bars.

Forgetting that the gang, Captain Foster went back over his trail to see if there were others of the gang still in hiding to attempt their business. Making inquiry among some of the settlers the inspector found to his surprise that several members of the gang were at work in the section of the country farther west over in the vicinity of White River, and that they were making their headquarters at Dave Connors' old ranch on the river, where they seemed to be immune from disturbance. It was at this place that he landed the three robbers at one haul, and in such an easy manner as to disconcert the robbers and make them feel that there were taken without having a show to escape.

Captain Foster went out to Murdo, one of the new towns on the Black Hills line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, and with the assistance of an officer, he started in pursuit of the horse thieves. The officers were prepared for a determined
