Clarence Darrow of Chicago, who had made a plea describing the case at issue as a struggle of "class against class," who both games of a double-header for Pueblo hostile to his client and had their minds poisoned by a corrupt and capitalistic press, had entered the court room with the mood of his speech still upon him, but as of counsel and with the prisoner himself in thanking, with many evidences of sincertty, the twelve citizens of Idaho who heard the evidence and rendered their unalterable opinion. Mr. Bichardson, toe. hastened to dictate a statement, in which he declared that his client had been given an absolutely fair and impartial trial and that Idaho had indeed reason to be proud of herself.

Goes First to His Mother.

Haywood's first thought was of his aged mother, who yesterday had suffered a complete nervous breakdown after the jury had retired. Leaving the court room in company with Attorney Nugent, he walked down to the lail portion of the building, shaking hands as he went with guards, employes and friends who had arrived on the scene. He bade farewell to Moyer, who, when he heard the verdict, said:

"That's good," and never stopped shaking, and to Pettibone, whom Darrow described to the jury as "Sort of Happy Hootigan," and who called, "Give my regards to Broadway." Then Haywood walked to St. Luke's hospital and unannounced, rushed into his mother's room. So great was the The score, first game: tonic upon the elderly woman that tonight she was up and about and happy Next Haywood went to the little cottage where his wife and daughters have been stopping. He had parted with Attorne Nugent at the hospital gate, and let alone in Boise, got all but lost and had to inquire his way from passersby. Once home, Haywood said: "I want to thank the people of Rola for their kindness to my wife, my mother, my family and my friends."

There has been widespread sympath here for Mrs. Carruthers, the prisoner mother. Senator Borah, for instance when first apprised of the verdict, said: "I feel glad for Haywood's mother."

Comment of the Jurors. Inquiry among the jurors after their dismissal revealed some of the elements entering into their decision. Samuel D. Gilman, the last man to be won over to the defense, declared that won over to the defense, declared that a majority of the men seemed convinced that the general tone of the court's instructions indicated that the defendant should be freed. Finley McBean, who yoted consistently for acquittal from the first, declared that the indires instructions indicated that the defendant should be freed. Home Run Wins for Stonx. SIGUX CITY, July 28.—The Sloux took today's game, the best of the eight-game series, from the Lincoln Ducklings by homeseries, from the Lincoln Ducklings by homerun hitting. Campbell put the finishing touches to a 5 to 6 score in the last half of the tenth inning by punching the pellet high over the center field fence. Nobilt figured prominently in the scoring with home runs, the first of which came in the second and started the Sloux on their long, uphill pull, and the second in the eighth, with no one on bases, tied the score. Jarrott pitched invincible ball and had it not been for the weirdest kind of work in the first two innings, he would have held Ling and E. W. Parker of the geological survey to make scientific study of fuel supplies, with the result that they assure us that the fear of a coal famine throughout the world in 2,000 years by reason of the exhaustions of the coal supply is not well founded.

The survey experts wish to emphasize the fact that the uncertainty in predicting for the future rests upon many unknown factors, chief among which is the future rate of increase in consumption. During the last fifty years production has increased enormously, the output for each decade being nearly double that of the preceding one, and if this rate of increase were to continue uninterruptedly we might look for exhaustion of the bituminous coal supply early in the twenty-first century. Against this, however, must be set a number of counteracting influences. Improvements in mining methods are increasing the amount of coal recovered and improved methods of consumption are increasing its efficiency as fuel. As the more accessible coal becomes exhausted and the deeper and more expensively mined beds have to be worked, the higher cost will necessitate further increase economy in mining methods and greater efficiency in utilization.

tuminous coal fields, prepared with much care by Mr. Campbell, shows that the total about 2,200,000,000,000 short tons. From this supply there have been extracted, according increase were to be allowed for, the bituminous coal supply would last 4,000 years. Taking into account, however, the probable rate, first, of increase, and, later, of decrease in production. Mr. Campbell and Mr. Parker are of the opinion that the bulk of the cheaply mined bituminous coal will be exhausted within 200 years; but when the period of decreasing production sets in the need for fuel will doubtless be supplied in life of the bituminous coal field.

Anthracite Now at Maximum.

So far as the anthracite region of Pennsylvania is concerned, predictions of exhaustion have been based mainly on estimates made by the Pennsylvania geological survey, which show that there were originally in the ground about 19,500,000,000 long tons of coal and that for every ton of coal mined one and a half tons were lost. This means that only 7,800,000,000 tons of the original supply were recoverable. To the close of 1906 the production has amounted to approximately 1.650,000,000 tons, which would leave 6,150,000,000 tons still available, and this, at the rate of production during the last four years (about 65,000,000 tons a year) would last about ninety years. Later estimates made by William Griffith of Scranton place the quantity of minable coal in the ground at the close of 1895 at 6,073,786,750 long tons. Since a little over 800,000,000 tons have been mined, leaving, say, 4,470,000,000 tons available, which, a the rate of 65,000,000 tons a year, would last about seventy years. But against both of these must be set the fact that production will not be maintained at the present rate until the coal is gone.

The annual anthracite production has about reached its maximum. When it does begin to decrease the rate will probably be slow. Moreover, with improved mine methods and increased prices of coal, beds are now being worked which were not included in the available reserves when the estimates were prepared. In addition probably 60 per cent is now recovered, instead of 40 per cent, under the old methods This saving alone would extend the life of the region one-half.

The utilization of small sizes of anthracite for steaming purposes, which has increased rapidly within the last few years, has not only reduced the waste in mining but is making possible the recovery of unsable fuel from the great culm banks that have stood as unsightly monuments to the wasteful methods of former years.

To what degree these factors will ex tend the life of the anthracite field it is not possible to say, but the conditions now existing indicate no danger of exhaustion during the present generation. A conservative statement is that soon the annual production and consumption of anthracita will decrease gradually, so that the supply will probably last for from 150 to 20

On the democratic side the filings indicate that a concerted effort is to be made to effect fusion again this year and that the candidate agreed on by the democratic bosses is Judge Albert of Columbus, who as a populist is supposed to be able to name, beginning with the letter A. which will put him at the top of both tickets. and begin the work of equalizing the value of property in the various countles and later to consider the levy. While the last legislature repealed or attempted to repeal the law providing for the 4-mill levy for the benefit of the public schools of the state, a question has risen regarding the action of the legislature. Some assert the repealing of the bill does not repeal the section regarding the levying of 1/2 mill, but that only the statute providing for the disposition of the revenue was repealed. The members of the board, however, are thoroughly familiar with the intent of the legislators and there is small likelihood of this levy being made. While this act of the legislature may result in a 1/2-mill reduction in the levy to be made by the state board, it will not save the people any considerable sum in the amount of taxes to be paid. It was discovered that each county gets out of the apportionment made by the state from this levy for school purposes practically what it paid in, hence the levy merely made a needless lot of advantage except in a few instances.

bookkeeping and work with no particular The levy for the general fund last year was 4% mills and this likely will be the levy again this year, as the appropriations of the last legislature were greatly in excess of those of the legislature of 1905, This legislature also provided for the levying of 1 mill for the state university and 1 m., 11:45 p. m. As the latter is now below the $2,000,000 mark, the next blennium will see a big reduction in the debt. Probably, however, not more than 85 or 90 per cent of the taxes will be collected.
