NEBRASKA FROM DAY TO DAY

Quaint and Curious Features of Life in a Rapidly Growing State.

While John Eilers was partaking of a drink last Friday a few of the boys got to work and loosened some of the burrs on his mower, stole his sickle and whip and the other tools, which necessitated him doing a whole lot of extra work before he got home.—Cornia Correspondence, Humphrey Democrat.

Nature Fake—Lightning cuts up queer capers sometimes. Reinhard Iverson brought a buggy whip to town Thursday that had been struck by lightning the evening previous. The bolt hit the whip a foot from the top and stripped off the outer covering to within a foot of the end of the handle.—Genoa Times.

Look Out for Jacob Now—Jake Shuck has got tired of walking and hereafter will put on a little stye. He bought a black horse of Jim Penny, Hank Barker gave him a top-buggy and Frank Woodley fitted him out with a pair of shafts and a set of single harness, so now he is all right for buggy riding.—Nebraska Advertiser.

Who's It?—A Norfolk woman had a sack of ancient graham flour. She suspected it had become wormy and sent it to the neighbor's to be fed to the chickens. Next morning the neighbors had graham meals, which the girl said later had been made from "that new flour." And now they're trying to figure out whether the joke was on the friend woman or the neighbors or the chickens.—Norfolk News.

Take Notice—The young woman of Pilger who lost her love letter out of her peck-a-boo waist, and when found a few hours afterward the writing was all eaten and several holes eaten in the paper by the flies in trying to get the sweets, sugar and taffy, out of the letter, ought to advise the young operator in Stanton to use fly paper and season his letters with a little pepper and salt.—Pilger Herald.

Next Necessity—The farmers are thinking seriously of placing lightning rods on their grain and hay stacks, and it seems proper that they should do so, as it is dangerous to leave a stack outside for even one night. During the sharp electrical storm last week Pete Wulf had an oats stack and Ous Root's hay stack struck by lightning and burned to the ground.—Kennard Enterprise.

Fairbury Table Manners—A Fairbury man went to Diller one day recently and was invited to eat at the new Colman hotel by Diller friends. The Fairbury man ate with his knife throughout the entire meal. Just before he finished he discovered that he had no fork. "Say," he said to his Diller friends, "that waiter didn't give me no fork." "You don't need any," was the reply. "The dickens I don't; what am I going to stir my coffee with?"—Fairbury Journal.

Two Versions—Maud Muller on a summer day raked the meadow sweet with hay, and the sun shone out, as was his habit, in that familiar way of his. 'til Maud broke out with prickly heat and then her language was such.—Beatrice Herald.

Headed by Jake Muller one summer day raked the meadow sweet with hay, and the mule with which he raked that hay was mugged don with spots of gray. Jake's shirt was hebrewy and his pants were brown with a patch on the part where Jake sat down.—Ragan Journal.

Hear the Corn Grow—The above expression may be regarded with some ridicule, as it, of course, seems a little ridiculous to think of hearing things grow, but an old and experienced farmer of this community says it is a fact, that one can go into the corn fields one of these warm, sultry evenings and by being very quiet, he will actually hear the corn grow, so rapid is its development at this time. The sound is a crackling, caused by the expansion of the husks and blades.—Sterling Star.

Carvings of Great Antiquity.

LANDER, Wyo., Aug. 18.—(Special)—Dr. Harlan I. Smith, the noted antiquarian of New York City, who was here some weeks ago, is much interested in what is known as the Red Rock, an immense cliff of red sandstone located about fourteen miles southeast of Lander.

The carved figures extend along the face of the cliff about 20 feet from the bottom of the canyon for more than 100 yards. Most of them are apparently of great antiquity, there being two that seem to be of modern times. It is evident that the two are of Indian workmanship.

They show the figure of a horse, and probably relate to a visit of white men to the country. Among the other figures are great tortoises, lizards and Aztec crosses made in the form of a plus sign.

The Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians say that the traditions of their tribe are to the effect that the incursions were here before they came to the country.

Some boys have a bicycle, but would rather have a boat. Some other boy has a boat, but would rather have a bicycle. No. 1 doesn't know anything about No. 2. No. 2 doesn't know anything about No. 1. A boy would immediately bring these two boys together, so that a trade might be made. Think about this suggestion.
