

GREATER OMAHA

OMAHA AS A MANUFACTURING CENTER

Omaha has within the last few years made remarkable strides as an industrial center. It is only a few years since people began to realize some of the many possibilities offered to manufacturing enterprises in the west. Prior to that time, the products of the western farms were shipped to eastern centers, manufactured into the finished product and sent back for use in the country of their origin. A few wide-awake men saw the error of the system and the advantage to be gained by the establishment of manufacturing enterprises where the raw materials were abundant and a market ready for the finished product. The success of the first experiments encouraged others and as a result, Omaha today has more than 250 manufacturing plants, turning out goods in almost every line, and giving employment to more than 15,000 well paid workmen.

In the list of manufacturing establishments, the concerns dealing in food products naturally head the list, Omaha being the veritable center of the live stock and grain producing section of the country. The city has for years ranked third as the great meat packing center of the country and is forging ahead at a rate which promises to soon place the city in second place. The packing house products handled by Omaha concerns for last year were valued at $123,050,000, and the record for the present year will show a large increase over those figures. The list of manufacturing concerns comprises the makers of about everything wanted for the sustenance, convenience, comfort and luxury of men. There are manufacturers of artificial limbs, art glass, awnings, baby carriages, badges, bags, bank fixtures, barrels, baking powder, boots and shoes,
