THOMPSON BELDEN & CO

Open Saturday Evenings.

Dec 8-30-07.

He says "He arrived in his carriage and went directly to his dressing room and from all appearances he saw nothing on the way there."

"He was certainly one of the best producers the stage has ever seen. He was a man of original ideas and of great genius. He was unsparring of expense in getting things staged to suit himself. He had carried with him, hundreds of dollars when cheaper ones would have served every purpose. The big boat in "Peer Gynt" which weighed about five tons, was an example of his prodigality of expense and trouble in getting proper settings. There was no paper mache stock in a Richard Mansfield play. In the wine scene in "Peer Gynt" he always had real wine of good quality and real oysters on the half shell. And when the show was over he would not allow the actors to touch that wine or the oysters. He seemed to consider them sacred. "We will certainly miss the big show this year."

RIVER HOLDS DEAD

dians, twenty-eight Indians and seventeen Americans; but the officials would not give out any names at present. They also state that five Canadians, four Indians and three Americans are injured. The Quebec Bridge company officials place the number of dead at seventy-eight. The bodies were brought here by steamer, this evening, and an inquest will be held.

Piers Still Remain Solid. The two piers appear to be still solid, and it is evident that the accident did not occur through the giving way of the masonry, but seems to have been caused by the weight of iron, about 700 feet of the bridge giving way. E. A. Hoare, chief engineer of the bridge company, has discovered nothing today that he was willing to communicate. So carefully, Mr. Hoare said, had he seen all the work executed and watched that it was most difficult to see where the defect could have been. James J. Keas, who worked on one of the big electric cranes, said today that a week ago the steel at the base of the arch outside the foremost pier had buckled slightly, but no one had considered this as a serious menace, since the outer end of the big bolt, which reached 300 feet to the air, seemed perfectly rigid. Although the immediate cause of the smash is supposed to have been the running of a heavily loaded train out to the end, it is evident that this merely hastened the disaster, since every hour the weight at the outer end of the structure was being increased as the huge girders were riveted into place.

Company Makes No Statement.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 30.—The Phoenix Bridge company, which has the contract for building the bridge, which collapsed yesterday near Quebec, has offices in this city. The plant is at Phoenixville, Pa. The news of the accident created great shock to all the company officials. Four representatives were sent to Quebec today and until their report is received the company will make no statement. The officials of the concern say they have no idea of the monetary loss incurred.

Mr. Davis, the treasurer, said: "I pray the loss of life is not as great as reported. I do not know how it happened. I thought everything was going well up there. We had entire charge of the construction and had 200 men at work under A. B. Milligan of Phoenixville." The great bridge built in sections at the west end of the company and was bolted together at Quebec.

LINDSAY TALKS FOR JUDGES

Denver Politician Comes to Omaha and Makes Speech on Saturday at Hotel Kenney.

"I never saw Mansfield smile. I don't believe he ever did smile. He lived entirely within himself. He didn't know half the members of his company. Once he came on the stage where I was standing and pointed to a man a few yards away. In his nervous, irritable way he said: 'Who is that person?' 'Why, Mr. Mansfield,' I said, 'that is a member of your company.' 'No, no,' he said, 'he is not. Put him off the stage.' I went over and asked the man whether he was a member of the company. He said certainly he was and had been all season. I asked him to step out of sight of Mansfield, which he did, and the great actor was satisfied.

The last time Mansfield appeared here he had one of his periodic rows with his stage director. Something on the stage did not suit him and he flew at the stage director with all the anger possible to his nervous nature. The stage director also became angry and he told Mansfield several plain things and followed the actor to his room. There Mansfield sat down and tapped the floor with his foot, a habit of his when agitated. "I won't go on, I won't go on," he kept repeating. Finally he told the stage director he was discharged and went on with the piece. I was told he discharged this man on an average of forty times in a season. He used to discharge many other members of the cast, but they stayed right on and he never remembered it any further.

Big Fair at Basin.

Basin, Wyo., Aug. 30.—(Special.)—The Big Horn county fair to be given at Basin September 16, 17, 18 and 19 will be the largest and most important fair ever given in this county. The fair grounds are rapidly being put into shape for the opening. Whole beehives are to be barbecued and served on the grounds in "round up" style. One of the most interesting features will be a long distance race with teams and camp outfits. The competitors will be required to make camp and cook a meal at each end of the twenty-five mile course. One of the most important gun shoots ever held in the state of Wyoming will occur at this time. Some of the members of the All American team will compete. Over $500 will be distributed in prizes.

Gas Well Still Unstopped.

BASIN, Wyo., Aug. 30.—(Special.)—The gas well recently struck about eight miles northeast of this town is still unstopped and wasting thousands of feet of natural gas daily. The owners are rushing material and talking means to cap it as soon as possible. Gas was struck in this well at a depth of 800 feet and an estimated pressure of 400 pounds per square inch obtained.

COLLAR SAVED MAN'S LIFE

Dragged Three Hundred Feet on Truck by Bolt on Engine that Caught It.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 30.—A linen collar saved the life of Edward R. Conroy at Glen Summit yesterday. He was nearly at Glen Summit yesterday. He was doing some work along the railroad track and was run down by a Lehigh Valley locomotive, but a projecting bolt caught his collar and held him a few inches above the rail while the locomotive dragged him 300 feet. He was half choked, and fainted when released by the train crew, but speedily recovered.

FIRE RECORD.

Many Lives Endangered. CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 30.—A fire in the Cantagria apartments in this city today endangered the lives of the early today endangered the lives of the members of twenty-eight families, including almost 50 people, and caused a property loss estimated at between $50,000 and $75,000. Several persons were taken out of

What a concern Mr. Mansfield's last hours or the arrangements for his funeral. Mr. Mansfield was taken ill seriously on March 24 last. Prior to that time Mr. Mansfield had suffered more or less from rheumatism, but his engagements for the week of February 18. During that week he rested and showed material improvement. He opened an engagement at the New Amsterdam theater in New York on February 25. For three weeks he played "Peer Gynt" and the fourth week he devoted to repertory. On the farewell night of the fourth week the bill was "The Parisian Romance." This was his last appearance on any stage, and, curiously enough, it was in the role of Baron Chevalier, in which he had made his first and perhaps his most lasting impression in New York.

On the following morning, Sunday, March 1, Mr. Mansfield and his company moved to Scranton, Pa., which was the first city on the itinerary on a brief spring tour. That evening, in his private car at Scranton, he was prostrated with acute abdominal pains, but not until the next morning would he permit cancellation of the engagements for the remainder of that week. Mr. Mansfield went to New York, where he was attended by Dr. Lockwood, Janeway and other specialists, who diagnosed his complaint as an affection of the liver. They encouraged his friends to believe that with a long rest and careful nursing his health might be restored and he might resume his career.

Sea Voyage of No Avail.

It was Mr. Mansfield's idea that a sea voyage and a summer in England, which he had been planning, would benefit him. He and his family sailed early in June and took a place in Cuckfield, Sussex, but his condition did not improve, and late in July he came back to the United States, and, while his country place at New London was being prepared for him, he and his family took a cottage at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Last Sunday he reached his New London home, feeling better apparently than he had for a month. Mr. Mansfield was a great sufferer from the time he was taken ill, but throughout his sickness he retained his vigorous mentality and sprightly humor. Mr. Mansfield is survived by his wife, Beatrice Cameron Mansfield, who until the birth of their one child, George Gibbs Mansfield, now 9 years old, was his leading woman for twelve years. He leaves two brothers, Felix and Henry Mansfield, and one sister, Madam Braxey of Macon, Ga.

AS THE THEATER MEN SAW HIM

Manager Monaghan and Stage Carpenter Porter Talk of "Governor."

"Richard Mansfield was always the big show in Omaha," said Charlie Porter, stage carpenter at the Boyd theater, who knew the late actor more intimately probably than any other theater man in Omaha. "He showed the peculiarities of his genius in many eccentric actions. "He was torn to pieces by his nerves all the time. The least little thing would get him on edge." But I think he was the greatest stage director America has known. I remember when he first came to Omaha, about ten years ago. He put on the "Parisian Romance" at the Creighton theater. He came to me and told me to have my men down early in the morning to set up certain scenes. We were there at 5 o'clock, and there he was sitting in one of the front chairs of the house. Then we set up things for him. Such a day as we had. We kept it at it until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. His eyes seemed to take in everything. He was so particular that when we got a chair placed to suit him we marked the exact spot on the stage. "I never saw Mansfield smile. I don't believe he ever did smile. He lived entirely within himself. He didn't know half the members of his company. Once he came on the stage where I was standing and pointed to a man a few yards away. In his nervous, irritable way he said: 'Who is that person?' 'Why, Mr. Mansfield,' I said, 'that is a member of your company.' 'No, no,' he said, 'he is not. Put him off the stage.' I went over and asked the man whether he was a member of the company. He said certainly he was and had been all season. I asked him to step out of sight of Mansfield, which he did, and the great actor was satisfied.

Finally he told the stage director he was discharged and went on with the piece. I was told he discharged this man on an average of forty times in a season. He used to discharge many other members of the cast, but they stayed right on and he never remembered it any further.
