POWER FROM THE SUN'S RAYS Philadelphia Inventor Hitches Up an Old System in a New

Way. By using the principle of the common bothed, used by farmers and florists, Frank Shuman, engineer and chemist, of 260 Disston street, Tacony, thinks he has the old problem of converting the heat of the sun into power at such a low cost that its commercial use is near at

On the Shuman property at Tacony there is what looks like a big hotbed, 18x60 feet, It is simply a big wooden box, sunk into of ordinary hothouse glass, with a oneluch air space between the layers. Instead of being filled with greens, it is filled with coiled iron pipes, painted black, and this is the power plant from which the inventor expects to get results.

These pipes, filled with ether in this climate, connect with a small upright engine hard by. The circuit is known as a 'closed one;" that is, the etner in the pipes is converted into vapor in the big box, passes through the engine, developing three and a half horsepower, thence into a condenser and back again to the hotbox. No fuel is used, the heat of the sun being refled upon to convert the liquid into vapor. In the tropics water would take the place of ether. Mr. Shuman said: "Steam engines have been known for years and so have hot-They have merely been combined Formerly solar engines were built on the principle of concentrating the sun's rays, which necessitated the construction of elaborate reflecting devices, costly and "This is the principle of my hotbox: If light rays of the sun in this latitude can he converted into heat they will yield a temperature somewhere about 350 or 400 degrees. In the tropics this would run to perhaps 500 degrees or higher. The light rays penetrate the double glass cover and are absorbed and converted into heat rays by the pipes. The air space prevents the heat from escaping, and whatever is in the pipes will boil. "If there is water in the pipes, it will found farming a very profitable employ-

Speaker Tells Residents of Territory They Should Vote for Constitution.

PAYS RESPECTS TO MR. TAFT

Nebraskan Says that the Secretary of War Always Talks for Delay in Matters of Importance.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okl., Sept. 6 .- Ten iousand persons heard William J. Bryan here tonight reply to the recent speech of Secretary of War Taft upon the Oklahoma and Indian Territory political situation in convention hall, and 2,000 persons, unable to secure admittance to the auditorium, attended an overflow meeting nearby. Mr. Bryan was enthusiastically received. In addition to scoring Secretary Taft soundly for placing his personal ambitions above the welfare of the people of Oklahoma and attacking the views of the secretary of war on national policies, Mr. Bryan declared that the constitution of the proposed new states was even better than that of the United States. Mr. Bryan said:

Mr. Bryan said:

Secretary Taft in his speech made in this territory a few days ago advises the people to reject the proposed constitution and postpone statehoed until another enabling act can be secured. At first blush one might auspect that the secretary's advice was due to his personal interest in the next election. He might be accused of advising the postponement of statehoed with a view to keeping seven electoral votes out of the democratic column, but the more generous view to take of the matter is that his advice resulted from his habits of thought. He is inclined to postpone everything. He promises to acquire the title of the great postponer. In a speech made not long ago at Columbus, O., he announced himself as in favor of tariff reforms, but he would postpone it until after the next election. He also made an elaborate argument in favor of the income tax, but he would postpone it indefinitely. He agreed with the president in regard to the wisdom of an inheritance tax, but that, too, he would postpone until a more convenient season rie did not seriously object to the valuation of railroads, but he did not declare for it immediately.

He is on his way to the Philippines to tell the Filippinos that while he thinks they ought to have self-government after a while, he wants it postponed for the pres-

As to Constitution. Mr. Bryan took up and answered Mr. Taft's objections to the Oklahoma consti-

Taft's objections to the Oklahoma constitution and continued:

Secretary Taft says that If you insist on having statehood and are determined to adopt the constitution, you outly to have a republican government to amend the constitution. He certainly has forgotten the argument he made in Ohio recently that the tariff ought to be reformed by its friends. If he applies his logic to the constitution, he ought to insist that the constitution should be reformed by its friends, rather than by its enemies, and surely there is little to induce confidence in the republican party when the party has delayed statehood for so many years, and delayed it for purely partisan reasons. The republican party, to secure partisan advantage, admitted several western states that were not nearly so well fitted for statehood as Oklahoma, but your people have long suffered the disadvantages of a territorial government merely because they did not approve of the policies of the republican party. Now they are asked to reward the republican party for the punishment it has inflicted upon them; but if this argument appears to republicans who oppose the constitution the democrats and the many republicans who favor the constitution will find in the secretary's speech additional reasons for supporting the democratic toket and thus rewarding the party which has submitted a constitution so good that even the republican convention of Oklahoma did not care to express disapproval of it. The secretary has shown a good deal of boldness in asking you to repudlate a constitution that a republican convention was not willing to condemn.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6 .- After a several months' tour of inquiry into the immigrathrough England and continental Europe. the members of the subcommittees of the United States Immigration commission arrived here today. The members of the commission returning today were Senators Dillingham of Vermont and Latimer of South Carolina, Congressman Howell of New Jersey, and Burnett of Alabama. The members obtained much data which they believe will aid in solving many immigration problems. Senator Dillingham made the following statement:

The subcommittee has visited every European country from which we receive any considerable number of immigrants, and has studied the more important phases of the question in each. The question of preventing the coming of criminal classes into the United States has been a chief subject of investigation, and it is probable that important recommendation on this matter will be made to congress.

The subject of emigration is a paramount one in most of the countries we have visited and in most of them the attitude toward emigration is not favorable. The constant and long continued drain upon the rural population from which class the great majority of emigrants come, and the The subcommittee has visited every great majority of emigrants come, and the general prosperity which now prevails, has produced a soarcity of farm labor and it is claimed the agricultural industry is suffering in consequence. Because of this scarcity of labor the condition of those remaining at home has, to a degree, been improved, but the general condition is causing much alarm among land owners and a strong sentiment against emigration has developed. A very large proportion of male emigrants leave their native country at a time when they are liable to military service there, and this constitutes a strong objection to some emigrants.

During the tour of inquiry and investication the commissioners have accounted by the Pueblo Chieftain and Trinigation the commissioners have secured important information and have made arrangements to secure more, and feel confident that hefore their work is completed recommendations can be made to congress which, is enacted into laws, will be both valuable and important.
