

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKET

Heavy Liquidation of Friday Leaves Things in Nervous State. LITTLE TRADING CARRIED ON

The market was nervous from the heavy liquidation of Friday and little trading was carried on. Cables showed a steady tone and there was a strong demand for wheat.

Wheat opened some firmer after the heavy liquidation of yesterday, owing to a strong demand for wheat in the northwest and foreign demand.

Primary wheat receipts were 500,000 bushels and shipments were 1,000,000 bushels against receipts last year of 1,000,000 bushels and shipments of 600,000 bushels.

ASIANICS WILL NOT REGISTER

Serious Condition Confronts British Government in Transvaal. MAY SPREAD TO OTHER NATIONS

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 14.—(Special.)—Will the Transvaal have to build a new jail to accommodate 10,000 Asiatics? Will the first law passed by the first elected Parliament be successfully defied by the eastern peoples within its borders?

These are the questions South Africa is asking. The Transvaal's latest trouble raises an issue of the greatest importance.

The Indians in the colony have armed themselves with the weapon of the English noncompliance. They have become passive resisters. They sit down and stubbornly refuse to obey the law.

It is declared by the administration that their numbers are being constantly added to by the influx of new arrivals from the strength of false permits or without any permits at all.

It was resolved, therefore, to find out precisely who are entitled to reside in the Transvaal, and for this purpose there was passed the Asiatic law amendment ordinance, which, although not regarded as the most important of the legislation allowed by the imperial authorities.

This law calls upon every Asiatic to apply for a registration certificate and on the form asking for this certificate every Asiatic male over 8 years of age must place his finger impressions.

Putting Act in Force. The government decided to put the act in force at once by districts. The first district was Pretoria, where the Asiatics were called upon to register between July 1 and July 31.

They placed pickets outside the registration office, and the official appointed to receive the applications sat all day and every day waiting for Asiatics who did not come. Then it was decided to receive applications secretly at night at private houses.

Fourteen Asiatics defied the law, and assuming that the proportion is maintained in all parts of the Transvaal, it will eventually be over 10,000 Asiatics liable first to a fine of 500 or three months' imprisonment, then to the loss of their trading licenses and finally deportation.

The Indians object to the principle of the act and also to its provisions. They declare it is a class legislation of the worst kind. They say that if every man in the Transvaal were called upon to register they would register as quickly as anyone. But when they are singled out by law they refuse. They protest that a precedent would be created; they say that once the principle of special legislation is admitted in the Transvaal, there is no guarantee that it will not be expanded and that they will be forced to live and trade in special locations, pay special taxes and, in fact, be treated differently from other British subjects.

The secondary objections are equally strong. They protest that the finger-print system is humiliating and degrading and classes them with criminals; they protest that the demand that they shall declare their mother's name is an insult to their religious ideas, for with many Indians it would be deemed a serious disgrace to utter the name of their mother.
