DOES SHE KNOW HUSBAND

Man Under Arrest on Bigamy Charge Says Witness Does Not.

MIXED UP WITH HALF BROTHER

Peculiar Defense Set Up by Henry G. Smith, Trial of Whose Case Was to Have Been Heard at Present Term of Court.

Can half-brothers be so alike in appearance that the wife of one cannot distinguish him from the other? G. Henry G. Smith, whose trial on a charge of bigamy was assigned for this week in district court at Council Bluffs, contends she can, and in order to secure the attendance of a witness now out of the state who, it is said, can prove that the defendant is correct in his contention, the case was yesterday continued by Judge Macy until the next term of court.

Smith was indicted September 25, 1906, on the charge of entering into a bigamous marriage with Mae E. Scott in this city on January 1, 1902, while he had a wife, Minnie Goodenough, from whom he had not been divorced, still living. Now, Smith, who had married again without getting through the formality of a divorce, she caused his arrest in the summer of 1906, after it is said, she had paid a visit at the farm where he is employed and resides. The second Mrs. Smith refused to believe the charge against her husband and, it is understood, still lives with him as his wife.

At the time of the preliminary hearing Smith, alias Goodenough, made no such claim as he does now and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury which indicted him at the term following. Smith, through the assistance of his employer, secured his liberty on a bond in the sum of $600.

Mrs. Minnie Goodenough, who claims to be Smith's first and lawful wife, is expected to reach Council Bluffs tomorrow for the trial, which had originally been assigned for Friday.

In granting the continuance yesterday, Judge Macy said, "It seems a peculiar state of affairs if the complaining witness cannot recognize her own husband. It may, however, be the case, so the case may be continued as requested until the next term."

Ed Kink, the negro, who with Matt Knight, assaulted Jailer Galtup and made a desperate attempt to break from the county jail, pleaded guilty to highway robbery and was sentenced by Judge Macy to nine months in the Anamosa penitentiary. King, who is only 15 years of age and is unable to read or write, ever since he pleaded guilty, although at the same time he protested his innocence of committing any crime. King was charged with taking a watch and chain from Chris Petersen, whom he met near the railroad tracks. He pawned the two articles for $2 at a Broadway pawn shop, where they were recovered by the police. King insisted that Petersen requested him to pawn the articles and that he gave Petersen $1.00 of the amount secured, demanded the other $1.00, and when King refused to give it to him, had the case, so the case may be continued as requested until the next term.

As the prisoner was led from the court room, Judge Macy seized the occasion to express sympathy for the colored man. He said: "It makes my blood boil to hear men denounce the negro, when he was brought here, stolen from his own land, and kept in bondage in America for 300 years by white men. The negroes nowhere had the opportunity that the average white man possesses. The attitude taken toward the negro is not the result of his color, but of his history—the history of his race. We do not regard in the same light other races of color, such as the Indian."

President Stinchey of Great Western Denies Rumor Company Shops Are to Be Removed from Oelwein. (From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Sept. 25.—(Special.)—A score of corporations have business now at the attorney general's office. Since the filing of the suit against the Centerville Light and Traction company in Appanoose county for doing business in the state contrary to law and since the announcement from the attorney general's office that other suits are to follow, every corporation that has been violating the laws of the state has gotten busy, and representatives are coming and writing to the attorney general's office. Each has the same government. Will the attorney general prosecute if they comply with the law now.

The law principally violated is that requiring corporations doing business in this state to file in this state with the secretary of state certified copies of their articles of incorporation. There is a fine of $100 a day for each day that they do not, and by filing now they do not escape punishment for the failure of the past unless the attorney general agrees not to prosecute. Thus far he has not agreed to do so. And in the afternoon burst forth the state will amount up into the millions of dollars if the suits are all successful, and there is a probability that they will be quite successful.

There is but one ground on which the corporations can escape and that is that the law exempts manufacturing and merchandise corporations. Now they are all claiming to be manufacturing corporations and it is possible that this claim may also be made by the two telegraph corporations. Shops Stop at Oelwein. President A. B. Stinchey of the Great Western railway, in a telegram received in this city today, denies unqualifiedly the report that the shops at that place may be moved from Oelwein to Des Moines. The report gained currency because of the strike of the machinists and boiler-makers at Oelwein, Mo., and that it was the largest on the line and employ about 2,000 persons.

Library Janitor Robbed. Bartel Nelson, janitor at the public library building, is mourning the loss of $22 which a sneak thief succeeded in abstracting yesterday from the pocket of his coat while he was attending to some work in another part of the building. It is Mr. Nelson's custom to lock the boiler room when he is engaged elsewhere about the building, but yesterday afternoon, intending to be away only a minute or two, he left the key in the door, and the thief noticed his coat was on the floor instead of on the hook, where he had left it. A search of the pockets disclosed the loss of the money.

Seventy per cent of the corn crop of Iowa is ready to cut, according to John R. Sage, director of the crop survey. The weekly bulletin today. He states that the remaining 30 per cent is variable as to hardness and that some of it needs from ten to fifteen days without frost, before it will be in condition to cut.

Plans to Contest Commission. Plans are being made by those who are opposed to the commission plan of government of cities to contest in the courts the legality of the Des Moines plan. This action will not be brought till late next spring, just before the election of commissioners. In that was the date of the plan after an illness of two weeks he was knocked out by the courts. Friends of the plan are trying to arrange to bring action before that time, so as to get the matter through the courts and out of the way before next spring's election.

Insulted the Navy. Judge Brennan of the district court sent the sheriff to the penitentiary for two boys who had been convicted of a second time for stealing, but whom the judge hesitated to send to the penitentiary. Lieutenant Downs, in charge of the recruiting station, was insulted and has demanded an apology. Judge Brennan says he does not propose to apologize.

Lowell News Note. FERRY—Richard Halley, an old and wealthy farmer, was instantly killed Monday. Some one came up behind his rig while he was in the city and the wheel became frightened, started up suddenly, Halley reined his horse, but the reins broke and the reaction threw him backward. His neck was snapped by the fall and he died instantly.

ALBA—An old abandoned mine was saited with the queerest mixture that ever was poured into a mine for self-preservation. Seventy cases and twelve sixties gallon kegs of liquor, which had been confiscated on Labor day, was poured into the coal shaft Monday. The jury of miners found that the liquor should have been returned to the brewery, but before it could be returned it was again seized. It took three hours to empty the supply.

ATLANTIC—Percy Chase, who was raised in the newspaper business in Chicago and who has been connected with the Case County Democrat in every capacity from apprentice to managing editor, has left Nampa, Idaho, where he has secured the managing editorship of the Nampa Leader, a semi-weekly paper of that place. His father, Charles F. Chase, will take his place here as manager of the Democrat and Ernest Tarnish has been secured as local editor of the paper.

ATLANTIC—Mrs. Johnson, living near Milne, succeeded in riding her chicken house of mites, but at the same time she lost the chicken house, and had the fire not been discovered when it was the dwelling house also would have been lost. She tried to destroy the mites by burning paper in the chicken house. The cracks of the building were stuffed with rags and some of these took fire. They smoldered all night and in the afternoon burst forth, same that destroyed the chicken house and threatened the other buildings nearby, but was discovered in time to save other property.
